Radio
Patter by Pat

Many local and network programs are being aired almost every day regarding the 1950 cancer drive.

Pat Wilkinson

Tonight over ABC and KYJC a dramatic adaptation of John Gunther's book, "Death Be Not Proud," a tragic account of the death of his teen-age son, John Gunther Jr., as a result of a brain tumor, will be presented from 9 to 9:30 p. m. A special score for the broadcast will be composed and the adaptation will make use of the narration technique.

• • •

On Wednesday at 9 p. m., in the interest of public service, Station KYJC will present a special program under auspices of the Jackson county chapter of the American Cancer society. Five young Medford artists will donate their time and talent to help the local committee of the American Cancer society in the 1950 cancer crusade—and in order to bring to your attention some important facts in the fight to control cancer. The following are scheduled to appear: Joan Anderson, Sonja Peterson, Keith Mirick, Fred Buehner and Max Pierce Jr. The program will be emceed by Doug Gaines, staff announcer at KYJC, and Mrs. John S. Day, district commander of the Oregon division of the American Cancer society, will speak.

This year the American Cancer society is attempting to raise a fund of $14,650,000—a goal achieved in last year's campaign—for use in cancer research, education and service.

Last February Henry J. Taylor, noted commentator, included in a broadcast a detailed explanation as to how listeners could receive copies of his radio scripts every week. Eleven thousand three hundred requests were received the first week following the announcement with 10,000 of that total asking to have their names placed on the ABC commentator's mailing list for the weekly mailings. Henry J. Taylor's quarter-hour program is aired over KYJC each Monday at 8:30 p. m. and if you wish to write for his scripts, address Henry J. Taylor, c/o General Motors Corp., Detroit, Mich.

New Pie Pan Said To Eliminate Soggy Crust

A new pie pan which eliminates soggy crusts made its debut last week in the homewares section of the J. J. Newberry company store.

The new pie pan was invented by Myrtle Short, owner of a Long Beach restaurant. Even though she was an expert pie baker she often had pies with soggy bottom crusts.

"Every homemaker knows from experience," according to Robert Agard, manager of Newberrys, "that when a dish of food even slightly warm is covered and placed in the refrigerator little beads of moisture form immediately on the under side of the cover. This is condensation; steam turns into water. That's what happens to pies."

Myrtle Short knew that if she could allow the steam from hot pies to escape immediately on through perforations in the bottom of the tin there could be no condensation and no soggy pie crusts.

Accordingly the bottom of the new pan has rows of perforations. Another perforated tin disk with convenient handles forms a second bottom. When moved to the baking position all perforations are closed. As soon as the baked pie comes from the oven the handles are turned to the second position with all perforations open to allow the escape of steam.

ABINGTON, Mass.—(UP)—Two youngsters, too small to reach a fire alarm box, showed firemen how they turned in a false alarm simply by standing on the seat of their tricycle and pulling the lever.

'Acme Telephoto'

'DISAPPOINTED'—Bob and Dianna Bixby, "very much disappointed" they were unable to break the globe-girdling speed mark set by the late Bill Odom, drink a hot coffee toast on their arrival in San Francisco. Just beyond Calcutta, the halfway mark of their flight, they blew a head gasket and their chances to break the 73-hour 5-minute record set by Odom. "The Flying Bixbys" had noped to circle the globe in about 66 hours, but ended up with a total time of 11 days 18 hours 6 minutes.

COPPER FOR FADING HAIR

Dr. Brady

It seems regrettable to complicate the problem, but recent scientific investigations by various workers have established the fact that iron alone, regardless of mineral, vegetable, organic or inorganic type of iron employed does not induce hemoglobin regeneration as readily or as rapidly as it does when a wee bit of copper is taken with it. Indeed, according to some authorities iron cannot be utilized in hemoglobin formation without the help of a wee bit of copper. Hemoglobin is the red coloring matter in the blood.

Animals that become anemic on milk diet (milk is deficient in iron) or from other causes often show a characteristic fading of hair color—if the hair or fur is black it fades to gray; if the hair is red it fades to a dull tan. At the same time the hair becomes coarse and dry. In many instances when such animals are given a wee daily ration of copper to supplement their regular feed, shed out and the new hair is the original black or red. So says Dr. George K. Davis, nutrition technologist of the Florida agricultural experiment station in Farm Forum, June '49.

Some observers of these effects in animals believe that copper serves as a catalyst (expediter) in the formation of melanin, the pigment of the hair, skin, the iris and choroid coat of the eye.

Premature graying of human hair is a familiar occurrence in nutritional deficience anemia, which physicians call hypochromic anemia. This type of anemia occurs most frequently in women who are fortyish or who will never be thirty again. Because of the complexion, the early graying of the hair etc., I call it the "gray sickness"—send stamped, self-addressed envelope for pamphlet on The Gray Sickness.

In the 19th century a type of so-called "primary" anemia known as chlorosis or the "green sickness" was common among teen age girls. Young women with chlorosis had a peculiar yellow-green tinge—the color of the subcutaneous fat blanket showing through the skin minus the pink of the blood. The impression of grayness, in case of the woman with nutritional deficiency anemia, is the color of the subcutaneous tissues minus the pink of the blood and minus the subcutaneous fat blanket. Young women with chlorosis retained the normal panniculus adiposis or padding or wrapping of fat, which gives roundness, smoothness and beauty to face and body. Women with nuetritional deficiency (hypochromic) anemia lose more or less of the fat padding, and consequently look not only gray but wrinkled, gaunt, angular and, I hate to say so, but unlovely. Indeed I wouldn't mention it, ladies, if I had to let it go at that. Although I like 'em plump, say 104 per cent over the measurements of the frights that conform to Hollywood standards, I have the greatest admiration and affection for victims of the gray sickness because I have known so many of them who commanded admiration and affection by their fine personality.

Whatever caused (I use the past tense because it is so rare today that many physicians have never seen a case at all) the green sickness was a question that baffled the doctors of the horse and buggy era. The "medical authorities" of the time ascribed it to heredity, defective development, neurosis, love, corset wearing, constipation, autointoxication (although this last term was invented later) and even "female weakness."

It seems pretty well established that the gray sickness is due to nutritional deficiency, that is, insufficient daily intake of one or more elements which are essential for good nutrition, functional efficiency, health. The nutritional deficiency is a matter of years, not just weeks or months.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS
Girdle, Girdle, Who Wears a Girdle

Actually, if a woman led a perfect physical life she would not need a girdle, because her abdominal wall would remain strong enough to support internal organs and keep her figure lovely. But how many women can do this? I believe the average woman is better off wearing a girdle. (Communication from a Corset Association).

Answer—Your job demands it. Just what a "perfect physical life" would be, in your opinion, remains indefinite. My advice to girls who want to keep not only that schoolgirl complexion but that schoolgirl figure is, don't begin wearing any kind of artificial harness or support just because you have reached the age when Madame de Fufura tells your credulous mamma that you need "molding and restraint." The most comfortable, effective and fashionable corset, girdle or supporter is upright, crosswise and criss-cross muscle of the abdominal wall — it has four-way stretch—and you can keep it always in top form by taking a reasonable amount of exercise daily.

Tuberculosis

Doctor told me not to take my children to visit mother, who has TB. Mother likes to handle the children (two and three years old) and sometimes they get fingers in mother's mouth. (Mrs. T. G.)

Answer—The doctor gave you good advice. Let us hope the children are not already infected.
