Historical Society To Seek Expert as Temporary Curator

A Southern Oregon Historical Society committee last evening voted to ask the Oregon Historical Society to lend the temporary services of an experienced curator for activation of the Jacksonville museum.

The committee, according to Chairman Robert Dodge, realizes that the work of receiving, cataloging, labeling and arranging display of the many items to be exhibited in the museum should be supervised by a person with experience and training in that field. Setting up a system for a certain amount of bookkeeping and other clerical work will also be involved, Dodge pointed out.

All of these considerations, he stated, led the committee to decide that the best solution would be to seek the temporary services of an accredited curator. It is believed that such a man can be secured through the state society without more expense than would be involved in trying to accomplish the task with untrained local aid.

Dodge stated further that selection of a permanent curator will be made from the list of Jacksonville applicants as soon as possible after the museum becomes a going concern. It is also planned that the permanent curator work for a time with the state society man to gain training.

Residents Agree On Soil Saving

A number of residents of the Sams Valley, Beagle, Table Rock and Meadows communities met last night at the Sams Valley school to consolidate their efforts in the interests of a soil conservation district in that area.

Petitions have been circulated for the past several weeks and far more than the necessary 25 signers have been obtained. Additional signatures will be sought, however, before the petitions are filed with the state soil conservation committee next Tuesday. The committee must schedule hearings in that area within 60 days after the petition is filed.

Tentative boundaries that were set last night would create a soil conservation district covering more than 50,000 acres in the northwest portion of the county. The district would be bounded on the south and east by the Rogue river and the north boundary would extend west into the upper reaches of the Evans valley to a point almost directly north of Gold Hill.

George Loftin, a Sams Valley rancher who has initiated the soil conservation movement in that area, said he had encountered practically no opposition to the plan in any of the four communities.

Fire Destroys Truck Loaded With Tires

A truck which belonged to the local Firestone store, its load of tires and other accessories, were completely destroyed by fire on the Butte Falls road yesterday afternoon, according to J. W. Murray, manager of the store.

The truck reportedly burned near the old Reese creek school. Origin of the fire was not determined. Murray said that Driver George Watson, Medford, glancing in his rear view mirror, saw the back of the truck in flames. By the time he could pull off the road and stop a fire extinguisher was ineffective.

Cargo of the truck was valued at between $1,500 and $2,000 and was partially insured, Murray stated.
