Mercy Flights Proposes 2 New Plane Engines for Ambulance

A suggestion for improvement in service, the installation of two more powerful engines in Jackson county's community project air ambulance, was made today by Mercy Flights, Inc., the non-profit corporation which operates the air emergency service. In a statement issued by the corporation's board of directors, the background of the project was given, and reasons for the new proposal. The statement follows:

We, the people of Jackson county, can be proud of having created a service unlike any other in existence—the non-profit, Mercy Flights Air Ambulance service.

This recognition is not confined to our own county, but has been publicized in many newspapers and trade journals throughout the western states. In addition, through the services which it has rendered in its short life of three months, Mercy Flights has gained recognition by the United States air force.

Air Force Praises
In a recent coast-wide radio program produced by the air force, the organization was praised as being the answer to one of the primary needs of communities in remote sections of the country. This the air force can readily appreciate, as it has men working 24 hours a day in the air evacuation branch, desperately trying to meet all of the requests for emergency air transportation of sick and injured persons in "out of the way" communities.

Obviously, if it were possible and practical, the best solution would be to station an ambulance aircraft at every available airport in the remote sections of our country. However, inasmuch as this is not the primary function of the air force, and cannot be done (or maintained in time of war), our interests can best be served by making it a community project as we have done here.

Two Flights Made
Our aircraft, a twin engine Cessna appropriately named "Rogue Wings of Mercy," was placed in service in January and has since made two emergency flights to Portland. One of the patients was a Medford woman, while the other was a man from North Bend. (Although it is not the intent to handle cases originating outside Jackson county, no other aircraft could be found anywhere in the state.)

In addition, the Mercy Flights organization has arranged for two other evacuations (both children) by air force aircraft—one before our own aircraft was placed in service, and the other while maintenance was being performed. In this respect, because of recognition by the air force for the job we are trying to do, they will consider any request from Mercy Flights sufficient, in lieu of the usually required telephone clearance from Washington, D. C. Thus, the only delay will be in flying the aircraft to Medford.

Pilots' Recommendation
When the Mercy Flights organization was first conceived, it was our belief that the twin-engine Cessna type aircraft was the most suitable and economical for the job we would have to do. After actually putting the ship to work, we still believe it is (especially since the next larger sized aircraft would cost $15,000 or more, and we have only $3,200 invested in this one). However, in the interests of safety and dependability, our pilots have recommended that a change be made in our present aircraft. Their suggestion is that the present 245 H. P. Jacobs engines be replaced with 300 H. P. Lycomings. They feel that the higher horsepower will give a better safety factor for operation at night and in bad weather. As this recommended engine change may some day be a factor in saving a life, we consider it a must item. However, it will necessarily be the response of the Jackson county residents which will be the deciding factor.

'Round the Clock
There is only one company on the coast which handles the Lycoming conversion, and their usual price for the job is $1,685, which includes two completely rebuilt engines. However, through a special arrangement with this company, and also due to the fact that our own mechanics will make the conversion, the total cost will only be $1,200. For this additional amount, the aircraft can be flown with the highest possible safety factor, day or night, or in any weather except where icing is present. Actually, this is the only way that the organization can serve to the fullest extent of its capabilities. Of the four cases we have handled, three have arisen at night. You be the judge, and let us serve you—around the clock.

Remember, your ambulance plane stands ready to serve you today. There has never been a better one available to the people of our county, but let's make it the best.

Testimony Heard in Two Civil Court Suits

All testimony has been heard in two civil cases being tried in county circuit court this week and time has been granted for the parties to file briefs. The two suits were combined for trial and involved the cases of Ben J. Trowbridge vs. A. K. Owens, Opal J. Pointer and Jens Jensen, and Rupp Construction company et al, vs. the same defendants.

The plaintiffs seek to foreclose on mechanics' liens against the Zoro club, a night club north of Medford now known as the Y club. Circuit Judge H. K. Hanna has granted the plaintiff 30 days to file a brief and the defendants another 30 days to file an answer. After that the plaintiffs will have 15 days to file their reply. Court sources said it was expected the case would not be concluded until after the summer recess.

Attorneys for the plaintiff are Kenneth Denman and G. W. Kellington. Edward C. Kelly is appearing for the defendants.

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—NINE

Scout Leaders To Hold Overnighter Training Session

Boy Scout leaders of the Big Pines, Ashland and Northern Siskiyou districts are planning an overnight training camp at the Hill Top ranch, 6 miles southwest of Medford, Saturday and Sunday.

The leaders will form into a "scout troop" with C. A. "Red" Stothers as scoutmaster, director of the training course. J. A. McDougall and George C. Flanagan will be assistant scoutmaster; John Danforth will act as senior patrol leader and Herb Sampert, Dr. William Roberts, John Eddy and Mel Cotton will serve as patrol leaders. Gifford Chindlund will be scribe and explorer scouts will be Bob Stothers, Bob Beach, Marty Johnson, Milo Grubb and John Heilbrunner. Clifford Hanson is serving as outdoor committee man.

Instruction Purpose
The purpose of the "overnighter" is to instruct the leaders in methods of planning and conducting troop camping. The program includes the use of equipment, selection of troop and patrol camps, and layout and planning, aluminum foil cooking and program planning of activities for a troop on an overnight hike. Special instructions in axmanship, tent pitching, first aid, campfire star study, woodlore, compass, measuring and wide games will be given by the troop leadership.

Men participating will receive the buckskin award for their part in the training camp, and special recognition. They will become members of Troop 401, the national number given to the Crater Lake Area council.

"This is the first 'scouter overnighter' that has been held in the Crater Lake Area council in the past three years. All scout leaders, troop, district and council committeemen are urged to attend, according to J. A. McDougall, council commissioner. Program will start at 1 p.m. Saturday at Hill Top Ranch and conclude at 4 p.m. Sunday.

Late Albert Nutson Rich in Friendships Is Vincent Tribute

Gold Hill, Apr. 21—The funeral service in Gold Hill yesterday for Albert Nutson was a sincere tribute paid by his friends and neighbors of the community, to a great man.

Great, not in the ways of a political or industrial leader; not in the ways of a hero, or a military chieftain, but great in the hearts of all the people that knew him.

The old Odd Fellows hall overflowed with the many who in deep respect had left their work and come from far and near. The procession of cars to the cemetery was two miles long—business in the town was at a standstill. A sign on the leading grocery store voiced the sentiments of all. It read, simply: "Will be closed this afternoon in memory of Al Nutson."

In the friendship and respect of all who knew him Al Nutson achieved his own greatness.

To Flush Rogue River

Grants Pass, Ore., Apr. 21—(U.P.)—Irrigation district officials were planning to close the gates of the irrigation dam and flush the Rogue river today in an effort to find the body of Walter Crouse Sr.

Crouse drowned Tuesday when he and two other district employees were swept over the 23-foot dam in their boat. Crouse's fellow workers were rescued.

Officials said they would try to snag Crouse's body by stretching a net below the bridge six miles below the dam.
