Radio Patter by Pat

Ray Robinson and Ray Barnes will trade punches in tonight's "Cavalcade Of Sports" fight broadcast over KYJC and ABC at 7:00 o'clock.

Pat Wilkinson

How Brad Runyon untangles a baffling murder case will be told on tonight's program of "The Fat Man" over KYJC at 8 o'clock immediately following the fights.

When Ozzie makes a big hit out of explaining feminine intuition to the boys, David and Ricky, he ties into something that almost gets out of hand.

On "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" tonight over Station KYJC at 9 o'clock, the entire family seizes onto intuition as a toll to get the things they want, and it takes Harriet's firm hand to see that they don't maneuver themselves out of seeing the season's opening ball game which each has set his heart on attending.

The true story of a handsome, egotistic thief, and how the FBI and local police cooperate to capture him is the actual file to be dramatized on Jerry Devine's "This Is You FBI" program over Station KYJC at 8:30 p.m.

The running of the $50,000 added Gallant Fox Handicap, a mile-and-three-sixteenth race for leading three-year-olds and up, will be described over Station KYJC at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Actress Betty Hutton, that inimitable miss of musical comedy currently starred in "Annie Get Your Gun," will direct her bubblesome enthusiasm toward movieland reporters when she sits in for the off cuff question-answer session as guest during the Saturday broadcast of ABC's "Hollywood Byline" broadcast over Station KYJC at 7 p.m. Saturday.

Old-Time Religion Making Comeback Writer Discovers

Washington—(U.P.)—About four years ago, Archie Robertson decided there was something more important he had to do than work for the federal government.

As he reasoned it out, the task appeared to shape up as an exhaustive search into the roots of American religion. Among the things he wanted learn for himself were where did this religion stem from, what forms did it take, and where is it now headed?

Robertson approached the question not as a religious fanatic. The son and grandson of leaders in the Baptist church, he had no particular religious compulsion beyond the natural curiosity of a newspaperman.

In 1946, Robertson was engaged on a special assignment for the late Edward R. Stettinius, then secretary of state. He gave up the job to make the first part of a 10,000-mile journey to all sections of the country to inquire into all forms of religion, past and present.

The results of his travels and questionings are to be found in "That Old-Time Religion," just published by Houghton Mifflin.

Robertson, who visited almost every kind of religious group in the country, has concluded that the "old-time religion" is on the upsurge. It is no longer the dogmatic, rule-of-the-book kind of religion but a more personal relationship between the worshipper and the things he believes in.

"The fact that some Americans chew gum during divine service may be deplorable but is surely not too important in the sight of God," he writes.

To get his material, Robertson investigated not only the large sects but the special cults. He found that the snake people would use a water moccasin for their rites if the rattlesnakes were hibernating.

He found a four-year-old ordained minister on the West Coast who could perform marriage. He found some hypocrisy in high places, but a lot of honest faith in others. His report on the future of the "old-time religion" is far from bearish.

Now an information specialist in Washington for the Economic Cooperation administration, Robertson disclosed in an interview that gathering material for his book was not completely a lark.

"Starting in July, 1946, I traveled by train to Tennessee, North Carolina, Los Angeles, Salt Lake City, Chicago and Boston," he said. "I thought I had all the material I needed. .

A YOUNG FATHER PROTESTS

Dr. Brady

In your tally of letters regarding the presence of the prospective father at the birth of his baby, please count this as one from young parents who believe you are misleading your readers when you imply that it is the husband's right or duty to witness the delivery in hospitals in the ..... area. (G. L., Jo.)

Young man, you are misled. So are too many other prospective and recent fathers who have written to me in similar vein. Not including titles or headings or similar contributions of near-editors, office boys, bright Girl Fridays etc., who take liberties with my copy, neither you nor any other misled young man can find in my writings the statement or the implication that the husband or prospective father should "witness" the birth of his baby.

Pray, young man, proceed.

Last March my wife gave birth to her second child (her child, young man?—that's the trouble with you and a million other prospective and recent fathers) at —— hospital. An hour or two before the birth she asked to see me. I was in the waiting-room thirty yards away. Her request was politely denied, in accordance with hospital policy and board of health regulations.

If you will take the time from your bowling to conduct a little investigating before sounding off again on this subject, you will find that practically all hospitals, probably in this area, will not allow . . . (G. L., Jr.)

Enough from you, young man. You annoy me. After all, I suppose you acquired your wrong impression of my sounding off on the presence of the husband at his wife's side at the supreme moment of their life, not from what I wrote, but from the odds and ends of my copy that were printed.

The idea of the husband or any one else "witnessing" childbirth never entered my head, until you uneducated or badly educated prospective or recent parents began telling me your childish troubles.

The prospective father's interest and concern in the matter is precisely the same as the interest and concern of the prospective mother. It is the birth of THEIR baby, the most sacred and the most trilling experience of life—THEIR life. To interpose any theoretical or artificial obstacle or prohibition in the way of man and wife sharing the miracle is unconscionable. My advice to the prospective parents is this: Give hospitals, lying-in institutions and doctors that separate parents a wide berth. If this is the "policy" in all the hospitals in your area, remember that in your own home you determine "policy." Remember, too, that home is the safest place to have a baby.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Sore On Hip

Mother has a large sore on hip which I think was caused by a spinal block during operation. What can we do for it? The doctor will not treat it any more. (Mrs. T.)

Answer—"Hip" covers a lot of territory. I doubt that a spinal injection had anything to do with it. Is it a bed-sore? Or did it follow an injection into the hip? A sore sometimes results from not injecting certain drugs deeply enough. Why not look up a new doctor?

Yogurt

Ben Told yogurt is deficient in calcium and cannot take the place of milk. What is the daily requirement of Calcium? (Mrs. G. H.)

Answer—You've BEN TOLD wrong. Requirements for calcium vary with age, activity and other factors. Minimal requirement is 0.8 grams. Maximal—in nursing mothers 2.0 grams. 1.5 grams in pregnancy. A gram is approximately 15 grains.

Color-Blindness

Recently examined for the navy and rejected for color blindness. Is there any cure for this? (P. R.)

Answer—Color blindness is usually only partial and in most occupations is no great handicap. There is no cure for it.
