CHRYSLER STRIKE ENDS—On the 100th day of Chrysler strike, C. I. O. United Auto Workers Public Relations Director Frank Winn (shirtsleeves, left) tells reporters that the strike is over as U. A. W. President Walter P. Reuther (behind outstretched arm) carries the contract approved by the union's executive committee in Detroit. Chrysler and the union approved an agreement providing $100 pensions, a hospital-medical program and non-economic contract improvements. The U. A. W. sought no wage increase during the billion-dollar strike.

Jap Suicide Rate Said on Increase As Postwar Distress Hits Country

Tokyo — (U.P.) — The Japanese, whose addiction to spectacular forms of self-destruction is world famous, are committing suicide at a higher rate today than ever before.

Economic distress, not thwarted love or an imagined offense to the Emperor, is the reason given for 70 per cent of more than 100 Tokyo suicides a month, according to the metropolitan police.

National statictiss vary, but Asahi, one of Japan's leading newspapers, claims that 20 Japanese a day have taken their own lives since the first of the year, a total of 1,500 suicides for the nation up until March 1. That is twice the war-time rate, Asahi said.

The issue caused a public outcry last month when Finance Minister Hayato Ikeda, asked to comment on the increasing number of suicides among business men, replied, "The suicide of five or 10 bankrupt small business men is a small price to pay for the economic recovery of Japan."

After a storm of editorial protest and an opposition demand for his resignation, Ikeda apologized for his "slip of the tongue."

Later Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida deplored the "wave of suicides and other criminal offenses" in Japan, but said similar social phenomena were occurring all over the world.

Many Japanese blame the government, and indirectly the occupation, for the rigid enforcement of a high tax rate, wage freezing, and the "tight money" situation which are said to cause most of the "economic" suicides.

While admitting that there is acute distress in some regions of Japan, occupation economists who are enforcing the "austerity" program laid down by the Detroit banker, Joseph M. Dodge, claim it has halted inflation, balanced the budget, stabilized the nation's economy and lowered the cost of living.

Unlike the traditional forms of hara kiri, in which the victim plunges a razor-sharp knife into his abdomen, or together with his sweetheart leaps into a volcano, poison is the commonest form of ending one's life in Japan today.

The newspaper Yomiuri, in a gruesome anlysis entitled "The Suicide Fad," found that of 85 cases in January, 41 persons died by an overdose of sleeping tablets, 18 by cyanide, six by throwing themselves in front of trains, five by rat poison, one by hanging and eight by "unknown means."

Mass cases of murder and suicide are reported in the press almost weekly. A Tokyo cabinet maker, out of a job, and unable to pay $125 assessed income tax, strangles his wife and three children, then dies by poison. . . . A widow, who inherited a failing factory from her husband, sends her four children to the movies and then takes poison with her elderly parents . . .
