Sprightly Tangier Lure to Tourists; Prices Rated Low

Tangier, Morocco (U.P.)—A city without income tax, an Arab town where the streets are washed and the citizens are clean, is luring more and more Europeans.

Tangier is also a tantalizing show window of the beauties of international control.

Since the Agadri crisis of 1906 over French Morocco almost set off World War I eight years early, Tangier has been the subject of international agreements. Spain, Portugal, Belgium, France, Holland, Italy, the United States and Britain all have hands in Tangier's administration. Arabs are represented by the Mendoub, personal representative of the Sultan of Morocco.

The Soviet Union joined the control commission for a time after World War II but objected to the presence of Franco Spain and withdrew.

Prices Rated Low

Prices are low in this model city. Scotch and American whiskies cost less than in their native countries. Bright new automobiles stream through the clean streets. American radios, French perfumes and British woolens compete in shops for the tourists' e
