Radio Dial Lights

By Johnny Ahern

That short 1230 club on Saturday was "just one of those things." However, it will be 15 minutes shorter hereafter, because of the news period at 4 p. m. It's your chance to pick up the latest news on Saturday afternoons.

Also on the news scene, tonight and every week night to follow, listen for "Tomorrow's Headlines" . . . five minutes of the latest world news, just before sign-off. Because of the 15 minute breakdowns, you won't find it on our daily log, but it's scheduled for 11:55 . . . starting tonight.

Personality portraits: Jimmy Dunlevy back from the north, full of information on what the rest of the radio world is doing. Sounds like better entertainment in the days to come. Strictly in the talk and planning stage now, but keep an eye on this column for more info, as fast as it's cleared.

In the What Now Dept.: One of our telephone quiz announcers trying to come up with a fair and equitable decision when he gets two people on the same line . . . both having the right answer. Everyone seemed happy with the tossed coin decision, however.

Don't know what you'll do with the information, but according to the events calendar, today is "Straw Hat day." Would suggest you consult the weather bureau before you take the news to heart.

Body Near Billboard Identified by Police

Portland, Ore., May 15—(U.P.)—Portland fingerprint experts today identified a body found behind a billboard here as Frank Lester Hartman, 53, of Carlton, Ore.

Portland police were notified by McMinnville police that Hartman's brother, Alfred Hartman, reported the man missing last week.

Portland records revealed that the dead man had a local record of arrests for intoxication.

The Multnomah county coroner's office said Alfred was due here late today to make final identifocation and take charge of the body. Although severe burns were found on the body, an autopsy disclosed that death was due to a heart attack.

Union of Movies And TV Forecast In Fight To Live

New York (U.P.)—Hal Fimberg, a top movie writer, predicts that the movie industry will "take over" television within five years.

"It must happen," he said, "if the film industry is to survive. Already, television has sounded the death knell of the neighborhood theater."

Fimberg is here preparing three television shows. He insisted that the conventional movies "are not here to stay."

"On the other hand," he said, "I don't think television has a good chance to progress without the aid of the movie industry. They need each other, desperately, and I can't see how they can help being merged."

Fimberg, who wrote for several of the Marx Brothers, Abbott and Costello and Frank Morgan movies, said the Hollywood of today "is on its last legs."

He said the movie business is in a slump, because, among other reasons, it: (1) had lost its foreign market; (2) failed to maintain quality standards; (3) lost a big audience to television, and (4) was being hurt by high box office prices.

"When television is mechanically able to function on a coast-to-coast basis, the movie industry as such will fold," he said. "However, when television gets that far, which should be easily within the next five years, it will need Hollywood.

"Television shows are far from adequate today, from a quality point of view. It will have to turn to Hollywood for its acting talent, it writers, its technicians and its directors. As a matter of fact, I think it's very likely that the television industry will move from New York to Hollywood."

Radio On Way

He predicted that the radio had but a short life to live, just as the movie house is fast losing its attraction.

"Daytime radio with its soap operas and newscasts, may live for awhile," Fimberg said. "But night time radio never will be able to compete with television. As for the movie house, I can't see how it can compete either."

Oakridge Man Guilty Manslaughter Charge

Eugene, Ore., May 15—(U.P.)—James Lloyd Thompson, 24-year-old Oakridge mill hand charged with the fatal shooting of Police Chief Clyde Dubell on March 19, was found guilty of manslaughter here late Friday.

Charged with second degree murder, Thompson was found guilty on the lesser count because of the defense contention that Dubell was arresting him for a misdemeanor and should not have pulled his gun.

Your Health and Its Care

THE OLD PNEUMONIA HOKUM

Comes to hand an article discussing the prevention of injuries in "sports," by wearing of specially designed pads, headgears and by the institution of various "safety first" measures such as removal of beverage bottles from the playing field or scene of action.

Dr Brady

The article states with reference to football and other scholastic "sports" that one out of ten participants is destined to "get hurt" before the end of the year—such "hurts" consisting in part of broken bones, broken skulls, ruptured kidneys and other injuries calculated to satisfy the desire of the on-lookers for action.

Whether or not such dangerous "sports" are essential to the development of the sterling character and health of our youths I leave to you to decide, as I have no need here to force my own opinion on you. One famous university, at least, decided some time ago that intercollegiate football had nothing whatever to do with the matter of higher education—except to interfere with it—and abolished the practice of competing in these events.

With reference to health, it is my opinion that dangerous sports do not and cannot possibly excel in health-building values milder and safer activities. The expert "footballer" is no more resistant to the development of various diseases than is the swimmer, the tennis-player or the hand-ball player. And all of these are greater insurance risks—life insurance, that is—than the sedentary clerk who ducks strenuous activities of all kinds.

Getting back to the article—the thing that caught my eye particularly was a statement to the effect that "dozens of athletes survive danger on the football field only to die of pneumonia as a result of taking a shower after the game and walking into a chill climate with their hair wet."

This statement is attributed to the secretary of an inter-scholastic athletic association—obviously a layman. As a physician I brand the statement a lot of malarkey. It is possible that someone could die of pneumonia after walking around in the cold with wet hair—he might also die after walking around the campus wearing a blonde on one arm. One has about as much to do with pneumonia as the other.

The old hokum refuses to be downed. The quaint notion that pneumonia is caused by exposure or chilling of a part of the body—or the entire body—persists. Pneumonia is caused by an infection—not by cold. Everyone who ever got pneumonia can recall, of course, when he stops to think about it, that he was "exposed" or "chilled," or "caught in a draft."

The everyday, common experiences of hunters, explorers, woodsmen and others addicted to the great out-doors should be sufficient to dispose of this notion. But no. There are always those who prefer to ignore the scientific facts of immunology and infection—who blithely by-pass the results of medical research—and explain things to their own home-spun satisfaction.

Consider this: There has recently been devised a method of treatment preceding amputation of an extremity, in which the member is packed in ice for days on end. Imagine a person in such desperate straits that he requires an amputation. Should not such a miserable and sick person develop pneumonia from the chilling? If the athlete gets pneumonia from cooling of wet hair, why shouldn't the victim of a circulatory obstruction causing gangrene in an extremity get pneumonia from the same type of chilling?

The answer, of course, is that neither one gets pneumonia because of chilling. Does anyone suppose that a respectable doctor in his right mind would knowingly subject a person to treatment which might give him pneumonia?

Cold is cold and pneumonia is pneumonia and "never the twain shall meet,"—with due apologies to Kipling.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Better Late Than Never

Your articles are excellent, especially the ones about spastic (mucous) colitis about twenty years ago. I want to say thank you very much for those articles—I used the flaxseed and the diet suggestions and got entirely rid of my colitis of 4 or 5 years standing . . . no such trouble since. (A. H.)

Answer—Thank you. Gist of the articles in booklet THE CONSTIPATION HABIT AND COLON HYGIENE. For copy send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Swimming

Is swimming, without a bathing cap, harmful to the hair? Or is it harmful to the ears or sinuses? In other words, is there a medical or hygienic reason why persons should wear a cap while swimming? (C. K. M.)

Answer—No. Swim with or without cap as you like.

Naphtha Unit Explosion Causes $25,000 Damage

Pittsburg, May 15—(U.P.)—A naphtha converter unit at the American Cyanamid company at nearby Bridgeville exploded Friday night and 75 employees working with chemicals and explosives escaped serious injury.

The blast was felt eight miles away and caused a near-panic among residents who feared a major catastrophe. Radio stations and newspapers were flooded with calls.

Plant Manager H. A. Van Brocklin said cause of the explosion could not be determined. He estimated damage at $25,000.
