Washington, May 17—(U.P.)—H. C. Howells is a wine lover. He had a story to tell, and the house agricultural committee was willing to listen—in private.

Sum and substance of his testimony was that he thought Americans are not gulping enough wine.

"I was raised on the stuff," he said, raising the brows of the dignified committee.

The witness was asked if he had any connection with the wine business. He said he certainly did not. He said he was head of a wine lover's organization, with no money or free wine attached. Nothing else.

But, said he:

"Americans drink only one-fifth of a gallon of wine per year per head. That's disgraceful. In Europe they drink almost 12 gallons a year per person."

Howells, who looked like a thinker, said he had been doing a lot of thinking.

Idea Came

Into his train of thought, he said, came an idea. Why doesn't our government come up with a wine-coordinating office within the agricultural department? Something to encourage people to drink more table wine.

Then he quoted an old European proverb:

"Wine is the enemy of alcohol."

The witness told the startled committee that he was not so much interested in prodding the country into more drinking as he was in improving our economy.

If the federal government would get back and shove the wine industry, he said, we'd be better off. As it is now, he said, the vine-gardeners are beset with problems like interstate transportation, state and federal regulations governing advertising, sale and taxation of wine.

If the American people would lay off the other stuff and start drinking wine, Howells said, we might get up to the European consumption.

Could Plant More Grapes

"We could plant 2,500,000 more acres of grapes," he said. "These grapes could and would thrive in soil depleted by other crops, and planting them would reduce the expense to taxpayers on government subsidies."

"We could put a million more people to work. We could add $3,500,000,000 to the national wealth each year. The federal government would be richer each year by $270 million in new taxes. I don't know how much the states would pick up in taxes because of the confused laws on wine taxes, but it amounts to an average of 26 cents a gallon."

Howells was a little tired by the time he finished his testimony, but he was able to answer a few questions. He said he'd spent a few years of his childhood abroad. His mother was half-French and wine was part of the daily diet. Howells himself has six children. They were raised on wine—although they like milk, too.

Since no legislation is involved the committee didn't say how it feels about Howells' ideas.

Roosevelt School To Hold Annual Roundup

The Parent-Teacher association-sponsored summer roundup for five and six-year-old children who will enter Roosevelt school next September will be held at the school's gymnasium Friday, May 19, at 9 a.m. The children will be given a health checkup and an opportunity to become acquainted with the school building.

Purpose of the summer roundup is to discover any health defects which need to be corrected before the child enters school, if he has not received an examination from his own family doctor.

Notices have been sent home with the school children advising parents of the roundup, though it is pointed out that any child entering school next fall for the first time is eligible to attend whether or not parents have received a notice.

The executive board of the Roosevelt association will be present to show children around the school and will give each child attending a treat. Those assisting the doctor and school nurse with registrations will be Mrs. Orbin Cooksey, Mrs. Earl Swanson and Mrs. Allan Perry.

Reservist Plans Told Rotarians By Local Officer

Thirty-four cents out of every dollar paid by American taxpayers goes to national defense, and this staggering cost is likely to increase next year, Maj. Jack Crawford, Medford business man and army logistical officer, stated Tuesday. Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Medford Rotary club at the Jackson hotel, Major Crawford warned that an aggressor nation may, at its own choice of time and place, strike a crippling blow with the latest modern weapons. America's sweeping reserve program is designed to ready the country for any instant emergency, he said.

He reminded Rotarians that one nation is seeking to impose its will, both economically and politically, upon the world, and that nation seems not content to stop short of world domination, willing if necessary to pay the cost in blood.

Feature of Week

The address was a feature of National Defense week, currently being observed and Armed Forces day Saturday, May 20. This year the reserve groups are seeking to familiarize the public with the nation's state of defense and encourage attention to the various unified services.

Since demobilization in late 1945 and 1946, there has been continued reserve activity in the Medford area, Major Crawford said. The first reserve unit to achieve recognition by the department of the army has been the 382nd quartermaster battalion. Announcement has been made of the activation soon of a logistical command located here, with a staff of approximately 56 officers. These units will comprise an important part of the mobilization day army force from this area.

At the present time the United States M-day fighting forces include six regular army divisions and nineteen national guard di-

Codling Moth Spray Advised by June 1

L. G. Gentner, entomologist at the southern Oregon branch experiment station, and C. B. Cordy, county agent for horticulture, today announced in a joint statement that the first cover spray for codling moth control on pears and apples should be completed on June 1.

They advise the use of one and a half pounds of 50 per cent DDT per 100 gallons. Where speed sprayers are used, they suggest seven pounds per acre on pears and 10 pounds per acre on apples.

If mites are present, Cordy and Gentner said orchardists should use either parathion, one pound per 100 gallons or five pounds per acre; TEPP, one-sixth visions, with similar organizations in the air force, navy, marines and coast guard. The speaker emphasized the great savings to taxpayers resulting from the reserve program over the cost of maintaining a similar establishment of regular fighting men.

Plans underway for a civilian defense set-up for this and other areas in Oregon were pointed out by Major Crawford. Major Fingerhut, reserve instructor in this district, was a guest at the meeting and Col. Cliff Lovejoy was chairman.

Rep. Giles French, a member of the legislative interim tax study committee in Medford Tuesday, spoke briefly concerning the forthcoming reapportionment measure to be considered by voters next fall. Passage of this measure would strengthen local government in Oregon and would keep the state's representation at Salem in alignment with the development and resources of the entire area instead of concentrating power in a single metropolitan district, French said. He was introduced by Frank J. Van Dyke.

President Jimmy Dunlevy reported briefly concerning the Astoria district conference of Rotarians last week.
