History Teacher Speaks Thursday For BPW Dinner

Dr. D. A. MacDougal, teacher of history at Southern Oregon college in Ashland, spoke Thursday night at a meeting of Medford Business and Professional Women's club warning that the United States cannot be strong enough to preserve peace unless she and other nations give up some of their sovereignty.

The Ashland professor told the assemblage at the Jackson hotel that America is not thinking enough about what is happening abroad, but is worrying too much about communism destroying the American way of life. Two-thirds of the world is underprivileged, he said, and added that this is the source of the world's trouble rather than expansion of the Russian periphery. This country has been pouring money into danger zones, but in the meantime is being outflanked by ideas in other spots, he said.

America's hope for peace lies in sending more and more food to needy areas, and in helping other nations build industrial centers with buying power, he declared. "A hungry man thinks only more food," he said, "and any change is welcome if he thinks it will bring more food." The speaker said since China is already lost to communism, this nation should concentrate on helping India. MacDougal declared the United States should help establish India as a strong technological nation and should see that the money spent there "is not tinged with imperialism," adding that the trend toward imperialism in this nation should stop.

The speaker declared democracy cannot be established in Europe through schools and teaching, since democracy is based on an economy of abundance, and said Europe's economy must be re-built along a different pattern. He said it would be "good business" to help build industrial machines which would buy our surpluses and said we should lower tariffs and encourage trade and added it would be better to have a little hardship in this country than another war.

Speaking of the military situation, Dr. MacDougal said this nation is now in a highly vulnerable position and said a "triangle between Chicago, New York and St. Louis would enclose 90 per cent of our war potential." Russia has 45 divisions in Europe as compared to two and one-half for this nation, he said, and declared that "Russia could take over Europe tomorrow."

In closing the speaker outlined a three-point program to keep peace, saying this depended upon food, industrial development and a "real dynamic plan to do away with sovereignty." He reminded that both Lincoln and Washington had once said "America is the last, best hope of mankind" and added that "both are still right."

Presented at the dinner was Mrs. Justin Smith, recently honored by Medford Zonta club as "Woman of the Year" for her work in international relations. She spoke briefly of UNESCO as offering a tangible program for the ordinary citizen to promote world peace.

Soloists were Larry Brunette, tenor and Raoul Breazeale, baritone, and they were accompanied by Ray Lewis.

Miss Arlene Arashiro, Hawaiian dancer, presented dance numbers. The meeting had been arranged by the international relations and UNESCO committees of the club, the former being headed by Mabel Hutley and the latter by Mrs. Edith Baker. A group of Ashland women were guests.
