City of Pittsburgh Bids for New Beauty

Pittsburgh (U.P.)—This sprawling capital of the coal and steel industry plans to start catching up with New York, Houston and other gleaming, futuristic-minded cities.

The western Pennsylvania industrial metropolis has in mind a $150,000,000 "Gateway Center," called by its planners more modern than New York's famed Rockefeller Center.

Construction will begin on the eight-building, four-square block project next July.

The first phase of the project calls for construction of three skyscraper office buildings at a cost of approximately $50,000,000. The Equitable Life Assurance Co., which is building this initial project, said it expects it to be completed by 1952.

The modernistic center is part of an overall, long-range plan to beautify Pittsburgh. Since the war a clean-up and highly-successful smoke control campaign has gone into effect.

NICE BUT EXPENSIVE

Lansing, Mich. (U.P.)—Frank Miller, novelty shop operator, has stocked a supply of mechanical canaries that sing when wound with a key. The novelties are made in France. However, Miller admits that he expects no rush of buyers. They sell for 75.

New Rubberized Suit Defeats Arctic Cold

Akron, O. (U.P.)—Armed forces personnel serving in Arctic areas are wearing a new type of exposure suit made of a rubberized fabric that remains serviceable even in 85-below-zero temperatures.

The new material is impregnated with a specially compounded type of man-made rubber developed by Goodrich research scientists.

One of the chief problems of our armed forces in World War II stemmed from the breakdown of rubber products used in the Arctic. Post-war research and developments have been directed toward finding new compounds that will assure flexibility of rubber at extremely low temperatures.
