Pressing buttons in the West rings a telephone in the East. Magic? Almost. But it's done many times each day.

NEW TELEPHONE MAP OF THE NATION

Call-speeding plan divides country into 80 areas

1. Long Distance operators in many Western cities are already putting through calls with "push-button" equipment like this...as the program to speed up cross-country calls moves ahead. The program divides the nation into some eighty areas...each with a three-digit code. Your area's code, plus your own number, will distinguish your telephone from all others in the United States and parts of Canada.

2. Today, nine out of ten Long Distance calls are put through while you stay on the line. Many of these calls are completed in less than thirty seconds. And here's a tip for better service: If you give the operator the number you want, she can often put your call through three times as fast as if you give just the name and address. So it's a good idea to keep a list of the out-of-town numbers you call.

3. We're making progress in extending this new "push-button" plan. But it will, of course, be some time before it's used universally. Meanwhile, Long Distance service has been restored to prewar quality or better. And the cost? You can call anywhere in the nation for not more than $2.50, plus tax, at the day station rate for three minutes. Even less after six in the evening. A real value.
