Roosevelt Neighborhood Holds Court of Awards; Folk Dances Presented

Girl scouts of Roosevelt neighborhood met for their court of awards last Friday evening in Roosevelt gymnasium. The program opened with singing by both scouts and parents. V. M. Califf spoke for a few moments on the need for volunteer scout fathers to work at Low Echo, and Mrs. Marjorie Hopkins introduced Mrs. Allan Perry as mistress of ceremonies for the evening.

Mrs. A. G. Stout's fifth grade troop presented the opening flag ceremony and each troop demonstrated a dance learned in the folk dancing class this spring.

Mrs. Robertson's fifth grade troop performed "Cotton Eyed Joe," Mrs. A. G. Stout's troop the "Korobuschka," Mrs. B. C. Taylor's sixth grade troop, the "BoKaZo," and Mrs. Carter's sixth grade troop the Fado Brasileiro.

Mrs. Perry spoke briefly on the time and effort given by the leaders each day to make their troops a success, and then each leader presented awards to the girls of her troop. The leaders also gave recognition to their assistant leaders and those of the parents who had helped during the year.

Shelia Spence and Janet Perry were presented World Friendship pins. Margaret Selby had earned an arrowed her pin earlier in the year.

Mrs. J. W. Barnard, who gave the instruction for the group folk dancing badge, presented badges to the girls who had earned them and was presented with a gift in return. Mrs. Barnard was assisted during the course of lessons by Mrs. Paul Skinner.

The program closed with scouts singing "Tell Me Why," the closing flag ceremony and the Girl scout hymn.

Travelers in India Describe Taj Mahal; Beirut on Itinerary

India is having the hottest summer in 75 years according to Dr. and Mrs. Bert R. Elliott, who have been spending a few weeks in that country during their around-the-world trip by air.

Dr. Elliott wrote that he had placed flowers on the spot where Gandhi was shot and also on his grave, and that the couple had visited the Taj Mahal, which the traveler described as "exquisite." "From each of the eight big rooms one may see the queen's tomb in the center of the building," he wrote. "I guess she deserved the honor as she is reputed to have borne the king 18 children in 17 years."

"The Taj Mahal has been given such a 'build up' that we were disappointed," Dr. Elliott wrote. "We prefer the deserted city of Ambar, near Jaipur." He also wrote of having visited the Calcutta YMCA building, a part of which was used in 1862 by Reginald Heber, composer of "Holy, Holy, Holy," "Greenland's Ice Mountains" and other religious music. "An appropriate plaque stands over the huge gate," he wrote. "The Red Fort of Delhi is historical and worth while, as is King Asoka's pillar, erected in 300 B.C. New Delhi is the eighth Delhi. The others are in various stages of decay."

The traveler also wrote that he and Mrs. Elliott had visited two places where elephant fights are held, and that tiger and elephant fights are also held.

"We found an elephant at the top of a hill about like Rocky Ann, and back," he wrote. "This was at the deserted city of Ambar. At the noted shrine there they had just killed, as they do each day, a goat as a sacrifice. Formerly a human sacrifice was made daily; the victim was determined by lot."

"At this shrine they were very particular that we remove all leather—as kodak cases, belts, purses, watch band and of course, our shoes. Our Moslem guide couldn't even go in at all."

"All this is nine miles from Jaipur, the 'pink city' and our favorite of India. We flew up from Delhi in 35 minutes and spent nine terrible hours in a side door 'pullman' of a tiny train coming back. Had a good view of the Ganges river as we flew over. Land here is sold in 12 by 12 'acres.'"

"They have a man pulling and releasing a rope which operates a fan cooling the god, made of concrete. At the King of Ambar's temple they have 400 unique buggies, surreys, camel busses, carts, etc., along the line of the one we occasionally drive in Medford parades."

"The refugees back and forth between India and Pakistan are a pitiful problem."

Dr. and Mrs. Elliott's itinerary called for them to spend May 31 to June 5 in Beirut, Lebanon, and from there they go to Cairo, Egypt.
