Plan Style Week In San Francisco; To Award 'Oscars'

San Francisco—In honor of San Francisco's famous fashion industry the week of June 11th has been proclaimed "Style Centennial Week" by Mayor Elmer E. Robinson (concurrent with Fall Market Week June 11-15) as an appropriate tribute to the industry's 100th successful year. The promotion, launched by the Manufacturers and Wholesalers association of San Francisco, has been given additional civic impetus by strong support from the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce.

San Francisco manufacturers and wholesalers are putting forth their latest and most colorful efforts toward a "Style Centennial" fashion show to be held in The Emporium Monday, June 12th at 6:30 p.m. The Emporium, in the impressive dome, will construct two elevated runways from each side of the dome which will converge on a central bandstand. Steps leading down from the bandstand will carry the models down to a 200 foot runway over the main floor center aisle.

The "Style Centennial" fashion show will represent a Fall preview of mens and boys sportswear, womens sportswear, dresses, robes, childrens and teenagers clothes, coats, suits, millinery, formals, bridal gowns and bridal parties.

Authentic 1850 gowns from the famous de Young Memorial Museum collection will be displayed appropriately lending additional flavor to the Centennial theme. Flowers banded along the runways and a string orchestra will provide color and atmosphere.

Continuing a market tradition, the association will hold the fifth annual "Oscar" award dinner, Tuesday, June 13th in the Gold Ballroom of the Fairmont hotel. The "Oscars," fashioned by San Francisco's internationally known sculptor Benjamin Buffano, will be awarded at a formal banquet and fall fashion show preview, to six men who have made a notable contribution in focusing attention on the San Francisco market. Winners this year are T. E. Brooks, chief administrative officer, city and county of San Francisco; E. C. Lipman, president of the Emporium Capwell corporation; Daniel E. Koshland, vice-president of Levi Strauss and company; Paul Verrier, president of the City of Paris; Michel D. Weill, president of The White House and Cyril Magnin, vice-president and general manager of Joseph Magnin stores.

Fall Market week, as sponsored by the association, will be held in conjunction with the West Coast Salesmen association in the Palace hotel, with over 200 apparel exhibitors showing several hundred lines.
