National Rose Jury Names All-American Varieties

Ten of the finest roses of all time have been chosen for top honors from the 36 varieties which won the coveted all-America rose selections award between 1940 and 1949. The selection was made by the National Rose Jury and the varieties named represent the best roses developed by the horticultural world in the past ten years.

All of the winners are hybrid teas, the most popular class with American gardeners. The top ten of the rose hit parade for the past decade were named in place of the annual selection of an All-America winner for 1951. The four 1950 champions, Fashion, a floribunda, and three hybrid teas, Mission Bells, Capistrano and Sutter's Gold, were not considered in the competition for the top ten because of their recent introduction.

The ten "finest roses" chosen by the jury are Peace, introduced in 1946; Charlotte Armstrong, 1941; Lowell Thomas, 1944; Taffeta, 1948; Nocturne, 1948; Rubaiyat, 1947; Forty-Niner, 1949; Katharine T. Marshall, 1943; Mirandy, 1945; San Fernando, 1948.

The all-American competition was started in 1939, and the first awards were given in 1940. Since that time amateurs and professionals alike have come to look forward to the annual announcement of the winners as one of the major events of the flower world.

The competition is said to both raise the standards of roses in general, and to help the public select the very best of the many new varieties introduced each year.

All varieties entered in the trial are required to go through a testing period of two years before they are introduced to the market. During this period, plants are sent to 19 official test gardens and six demonstration gardens located in different parts of the country so that they may be observed under every major climatic and soil condition. For two years they are carefully checked and scored by impartial judges and the roses compiling the highest scores are then submitted to the National Rose Jury which selects the final winners.

Peace has become one of the country's favorite roses. Its large double blooms pass through a wide range of color, showing tints of yellow, pale gold, cream and ivory with a slight flush of pink edging on the ruffled petals. Peace is a sturdy, magnificent grower and has shiny, dark green foliage.

Charlotte Armstrong is the oldest rose among the "Top Ten." Its popularity has increased with the years and its selection as one of the finest modern roses will be protested by no one. It is an all-climate rose with magnificent rich cerise blooms about four inches across and retains its true color until the petals drop.

Lowell Thomas is a rich golden yellow rose that thrives in all sections of the country. The buds are long and tightly furled and open into large, graceful flowers about four inches in diameter. The 25-petaled blooms are high-centered, exquisite in form, and are borne on long stems and make unusually effective cut flower displays.

Taffeta is a rich carmine in the bud stage and opens into fascinating combinations of rose-pink, salmon and apricot. The flowers are semi-double, having about 21 petals and have a pleasant fragrance.

Nocturne has become one of the most popular deep red roses. Its buds are long and slender and are beautifully formed. The open flower is a bright cardinal red with darker shadings of crimson.

Rubaiyat has become a particularly favorite with gardeners everywhere. The plants produce vigorous growth and have demonstrated a remarkable resistance to disease. Buds are long and well formed with a pleasing crimson-pink exterior.

Katherine T. Marshall, one of the outstanding pink roses, was named for the wife of the wartime chief of staff. The rose is handsomely formed with long, pointed buds of deep coral-pink suffused with yellow.

Forty-Niner was named in honor of the California gold rush of 1849 and is regarded by many as the most brilliant bi-colored rose ever developed. The petals are a rich chrome yellow on the outside while inside they are a brilliant Chinese red which deepens to cherry red with age.

Mirandy is vigorous and free branching and is medium in height. It is at its best in the warmer months and in the warmer climates when it yields a profusion of huge, full blooms of some 50 petals. The long, pointed buds are of deep red with black shading and the open flower is an exciting chrysanthemum red. Mirandy has a rich, penetrating Damask fragrance, and is perhaps the most fragrant rose of the top ten.

San Fernando is a striking red. The plant grows vigorously in all sections of the country and its foliage is dark and leathery. The long, beautifully formed buds open into blooms of an intense currant-red.

Of the four 1950 winners, Fashion is an unusual floribunda of coral pink suffused with gold; Mission Bells is a hybrid tea of deep salmon pink which opens into a clear shrimp pink; Capistrano is a hardy variety with flowers of glowing rose-pink which sometimes reach a breadth of six inches and Sutter's Gold has pointed yellow buds shaded with orange and red.
