MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—THIRTEEN

60 Trainees End Fire Prevention Forest Training

Sixty trainees, representing the key men in the first control organization of the Rogue River national forest, left the classroom today and returned to the field to begin their annual work of protecting southern Oregon forests from the ravages of another fire season.
The 60 are responsible for the protection of a forest area covering about a million acres. During the past three days they have been getting instruction in map reading, the use of fire-finder instruments, smokechasing, small fire suppression, the elements of fire behavior and the factors which influence fire behavior on a going forest fire. Small crew action on medium sized fires and foremanship on large fires where large crews are employed.

Three-Day School
This year's school for fire guards was held the past three days in the Butte Falls ranger district and was under the supervision of Verus W. Dahlin, fire control staff officer for the forest.

The trainees were from all the ranger districts in the Rogue River forest—Applegate, Ashland, Butte Falls, Klamath and Union Creek. In addition, District Rangers Loran J. Cooper, Applegate; Harold A. Thomas, Ashland; Robert M. Bee man, Butte Falls; Robert L. Cooper, Klamath, and Harold C. Christwell, Union Creek, attended the meetings and served as instructors.

Members of the Nebraska unicameral legislature are elected without party designations.

San Francisco's Civic Center comprises about eight city blocks.
