

Southern Oregon's Damaged Timber Nominal, But Other Areas Have Severe Problem

The amount of windthrown, beetle-killed and fire-killed timber in the Rogue River National forest, as determined by field checks prior to the fall close-down of operations, is only nominal, it was reported today by J. H. Wood, forest supervisor. Wood pointed out that checks are not complete on conditions which may have developed since the fall close-down.

Salvage sales planned during 1952 for removal of all timber fire-damaged on the national forest during 1951 will amount to about one-half million board feet, Wood stated. During 1951, salvage of windthrown and beetle-damaged timber on the Rogue River National forest amounted to about 2,000,000 board feet, he said.

'Jacksonville' Wins Jackpot for Women

Mrs. Lyle R. Schoppert, 720 Crater Lake avenue, this morning was named winner of the Mystery City contest on the Ralph Edwards radio show.

Listeners were asked to identify names of American cities from sound effects broadcast over the NBC program.

Mrs. Schoppert, working with a friend, Mrs. Joe Brooks, 517 Western avenue, assembled the sound effects for last week's Mystery City and decided they described Jacksonville. They were notified Friday by phone that they had won the jackpot of prizes and the formal announcement was made over KMED this morning on the regular broadcast of the show. The two women were later interviewed in person by members of the KMED staff.

Jacksonville was described by the sound of money jingling on a table for "Jack"; by a baby crying "mama" for "son"; the opening chords of Beethoven's Fifth symphony, which sounds like the more signal for "v"; and the sound of a moaning man for "ill."

The list of prizes included an automatic washer, a television set, gas range, vacuum cleaner, set of dishes and set of luggage.
