New Strawberry Found As Processing Variety

Geneva, N. Y. — (U.P.) — The breeding program at the state agricultural experiment station here has produced a new strawberry named "Eden" which is especially promising as a processing variety.

Tests have revealed that it qualifies as a sliced frozen product and for preserving and canning.

The new strawberry is large, wedge conic in shape, attractive and glossy, and medium to slightly dark red in color. The fruit is firm and red to the center, tart, and fair to good in quality. The first picking is made along with or slightly ahead of the Sparkle variety.
