

Fashionable London Hatter To Fit Elizabeth's Crown

London —(U.P.)— Shakespeare said only half of it when he wrote "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown."

The crown doesn't lie so easily, either, unless it fits.

The fashionable hatters along London's expensive Bond Street are wondering who is going to get the job of making England's ponderous imperial crown sit easily on the head of young Queen Elizabeth II at the coronation next year.

No one knows yet, but heavily tipped is the firm of Herbert Johnson, hatters to Edward VII, George V and George VI.

Actually, two crowns are used at the coronation. Edward the Confessor's known as the Crown of England, and the imperial state crown, will both be worn.

The Confessor's crown may not be worn outside Westminster Abbey, so Queen Elizabeth will have to wear the imperial crown the rest of the day. It weighs more than five pounds, complete with its 2,700 diamonds and other gems.

Worn Since Victoria
It will be the hatter's job to make it comfortable. The crown is the same worn since Victoria's reign. Before that, each king had one made specially for himself. It is completely circular, looks top heavy and has to sit at just the right angle to give that air of regal dignity.

An expert at Johnsons said the crown probably would be fitted in the same way as British guardsmen's steel helmets. The inside would be lined with soft chamois leather and four silk pads will anchor it at four places on the queen's head. A fold of soft velvet added to the lining will give an extra grip on the hair.

The crown is so heavy that if it rested on the queen's forehead it would give her a royal-size headache, he explained.

Alfred—he's the amateur cook who burnt the cakes—had a crown made of gold wire but it was destroyed with the original crown of Edward the Confessor at the time of Cromwell's commonwealth. England had no king then. The present crown of England is a copy made from memory of the original, lost in 1661.

Some say the original was not destroyed but hidden away. Historians say it must have been well hidden as there is no trace of it.

Senator To Speak For Prospect PTA; To Hold Election

Prospect—Ben Day, state senator from Medford, will address members of Prospect Parent-Teacher association when they meet Tuesday, March 25, at 8:30 p. m. for a potluck supper. He will speak on those issues which will be up for vote at the general election and will answer questions from the audience.

The nominating committee will report and election of officers for the coming year will take place.

Those planning to attend and who have not been contacted are requested to take a hot dish and salad in addition to their own table service. Child care will be provided during the business meeting.

Both members and anyone else interested are invited to attend, and the president points out that the meeting is an important one.

The executive board of the association met March 18 at the home of Mrs. Archie McKillop. Final plans were made for the regular meeting of the organization March 25 and for the show presented at Prospect Community hall March 26. A report was given by the nominating committee to the group.

Mrs. Roscoe Larson and Mrs. Robert Leavengood assisted with the installation ceremonies.

Mrs. Al Crose presented the newly formed group with their charter, and a bouquet from the state organization. Officers' pins were gifts from the Prospect group.

Refreshments were served from a table decorated in purple and gold. Pouring were Mrs. Charles Funk and Mrs. Norman Halliburton.

Honored guests from Shady Cove were Mesdames Ted Jantzer, Don Harmon, Delbert Spain, Carter Wood, A. Williams, Larry Shae, Gus Olson, Jack Martin, W. A. Darling, S. Long, Billy Greer, Milton Beck and P. Bates.

Contemporary Works To Be Played Today On "Guest Conductor"

"Guest Conductor," an hour's intimate broadcast of classical music conducted each Sunday from 4 to 5 p. m. over radio station KYJC, today will feature selections from the music library of A. C. Allen Jr.

"Midsummer Vagabond" ("Midsummer Vigil"), by Alfvén, a contemporary Swedish composer, and Sibelius' "Swan of Tuonela" will be two of the selections played by Mr. Allen today.

Those of the valley who would like to participate in this weekly broadcast are invited to call the station for scheduling. The day's "guest conductor" conducts his own program and comments personally on each of the selections, giving an explanation of the music, the reasons why he or she enjoys the selections and other interesting data.
