New Equipment Featured in Shoe Service Business

The combined store of Randy Nichols and Coy Bailey, known as the Medford Shoe service, which recently opened in the Allen hotel building, includes new equipment throughout. With the recent modernization program completed, the shoe shop now also specializes in shoe shines for women customers.

Added to the shine department is a new method of shoe dyeing and cleaning using the latest in dyeing machinery. This new service includes dyeing and cleaning of fabric, suede and slick leather finished shoes.

Nichols said yesterday that he will guarantee the dye will not rub off. He also stated he can match shoes in the dyeing process with shades of clothing fabrics to make matched outfits. Cleaning and redyeing riding boots is another specialty, he said.

Bailey, who operated a shoe repair shop for 11 years at 105 West Main street until moving to the new location recently, offers a full shoe repair service for men's, women's and children's shoes.

A particular specialty of Bailey is making leather-lined, zipper equipped covers for Bibles or other valuable books from genuine Morocco leather or calfskin leather.

Police Renew Driver License for Man, 82

Detroit — (U.P.) — Police were dubious about the wisdom of renewing his driver's license when 82-year-old John Medwed showed up at headquarters.

"Where are your glasses?" he was asked.

Medwed said he threw them away three years ago because they were "too much of a nuisance."

"Where's your car?"

The elderly motorist, who has had only four tickets in 27 years of driving, said he left it at home because it was too slippery to drive.

Skeptical officers drove him home when he insisted on a road test. He backed his 1930 car on to his slippery and narrow alley driveway and took off into heavy rush hour traffic without a hitch.

Medwed observed every traffic regulation, got his new license and smiled at the policeman: "Tell the boys at headquarters I'll be back in three years."
