Notorious Puerto Rican Plays Tag Game With Cops

San Juan, P. R. (U.P.)—A scar-faced carpenter with a lust for murder and violence has been playing a deadly game of tag with police in the dense sugar cane fields of this island for almost 17 months.

Antonio Correa Cotto, 32, now has a $1,500 price on his head as the most notorious killer Puerto Rico has seen in at least half a century. He has murdered four persons and is partly responsible for two other killings.

His record, which goes back to 1941, includes many other attempted murders. He usually uses a .38 caliber revolver. He always takes his victims by surprise, usually late at night, and before dispatching them makes some comment such as: "You dirty pig, I'm going to kill you!"

All of Correa Cotto's victims have been accused by him of trying to turn him in to the police. Insular authorities, facing rising public indignation and the threat of a legislative investigation, are trying hard to capture the escaped fugitive, dead or alive. It is regarded as certain, however, that he will not surrender.

Three bloodhounds from Florida were put on his trail and every policeman who could be spared from service elsewhere has been assigned to the case. The chief of police, Col. Salvador T. Roig, is directing the manhunt.

Aiding local authorities are four Florida police officials who brought the bloodhounds here by plane. They are J. A. Youell, assistant chief of the Miami police; A. Hagan Parrish, sheriff of Polk county; Tom Lipe of the Miami police and Carl Andrews of the Polk County sheriff's office.

Criticism of police has mainly centered around the fact that the convict has been operating in and around the city of Ponce—his home town—on the southern coast. That is, in an area of not more than 30 square miles.

Puerto Rico itself is only 100 miles long and 35 miles wide. Police, however, have been
