Wife Kills Male Following Futile Reunion Attempt

Los Angeles—(U.P.)—Pretty, blonde Mrs. Barbara Joy Plymire, 20, told police Monday that she shot and killed her estranged husband during a birthday party at which she hoped to win him back.

"When you love someone, 'no' is not answer enough," she said. The young mother of two small children, held on suspicion of murder, said she became enraged by jeers and laughter and a slap in the face in response to her pleas for reconciliation.

"Can't Stand Treatment

"When you love a person you just can't stand that kind of treatment," she sobbed.

Police said she shot her husband, Leslie Raymond Plymire, 24, a plastics worker, in the chest at the home of her sister, Mrs. Raymond O. Smith. It was the tragic climax to a birthday party Sunday to which both Plymire and his estranged wife had been invited in hopes they would reconcile.

Mrs. Plymire shot her husband with her brother-in-law's revolver after first firing a bullet at his feet, witnesses said. He knocked the gun from her hand and as two men interceded in the struggle, she retrieved it and fired the shot which killed Plymire.

Mrs. Plymire told police she was married to Plymire in 1950, and they separated last year shortly after he learned she was expecting a child, Pamela Leslie, now 4 months old.

"He didn't want the baby," she sobbed, "and he was mean and nasty all the time, so we just separated."

"Leslie said he was tired of being married and didn't want to have children."

Mrs. Plymire also has another child from a former marriage, Virginia Joy Luedeman, 2.

Rehearsals Under Way For Jacksonville Play

Jacksonville—Final rehearsals for "Brides to Burn," Jacksonville senior class high school play scheduled for April 10, are now in progress, according to Bob MacLauchlan, Medford, play director, and Footlighters civic theater member.

The three-act farce has a cast of 11 students, five boys and six girls.

So that all students of the grade and high school may have the opportunity of seeing the play, a matinee performance will be given at the school Thursday afternoon at a nominal charge.

The Thursday evening performance is set for 8 p. m.

Arrest Follows Car Collision on Sunday

City police arrested Ben Arma Olea, 363 South Central avenue, following a collision early Sunday morning at North Front and East Fifth streets, they reported today.

He was charged with reckless driving with liquor involved, and posted $25 bail in police court, records of the court showed. The police report said that a fender, the headlights and windshield of Olea's car were damaged when it struck a parked car registered to Joe Blank, 333 West second street. The Blank car was undamaged police added.

Mail Tribune Story Gets Banks Switched

A story in The Mail Tribune got the two Medford banks switched around yesterday. The article concerned the fact that Time magazine had a "Miscellaneous" item about a time vault lock which had been set wrong, and necessitated a short term cash loan from one bank to another.

The Mail Tribune's story inadvertently credited the mishap to the First National bank's branch here, when it should have been the U.S. National bank.

Jacksonville Cemetery Cleanup Work Started

Jacksonville—The annual pre-Decoration day cleanup work at the Jacksonville cemetery is under way, according to Carl S. Hoskins, sexton. He is attempting to do as much of the work as possible. However, to get all the work done by Memorial day, May 30, those owning lots are asked to clean the lots themselves or to arrange with the sexton for the work, Hoskins added.

The work will be done for those requesting it at nominal charge and according to the time of the requests, the sexton said. Trash must be removed from the cemetery, according to a city ordinance, he added.

Arrangements may be made with Hoskins by telephoning Medford 3-1477 or writing Post-office Box 38, Jacksonville.

Committee Meeting Will Study Zoning

The Jackson County Rural Life committee will meet at 8 p. m. today in the extension agent's office in the county courthouse to consider the possibility of reviving the twice-debated county zoning measure in Jackson county.

Bruce Grieve, Prospect, is chairman of the committee, which studies a variety of measures which have a bearing on rural life in the area.

Some 12 or 15 members are expected to attend.

The county zoning measure has been before the voters of Jackson county twice in recent years and was defeated both times, the last time by a narrow margin. The committee hopes to gain sufficient support to get it on the November general election ballot.

Woodlot Management Clinic Set Tuesday

A woodlot management clinic will be conducted at the Sams Valley ranch of State Sen. Ben Day tomorrow, it was reported here this morning. Paul Goodman, Oregon State college woodlot specialist, will be in charge of the demonstrations, which will concern proper management of second growth fir and pine.

Bob Furness, federal entomologist; Lloyd Hayes, of the Pacific Northwest Forest and Range experiment station's Roseburg branch; Dale Prentiss, of Western Pine association, and Hardy Clascok of West Coast Lumbermen's association, will also participate.

The demonstrations will show how farmers may obtain supplemental income from their own farm woodlots when they are used on a managed and continuous basis.

1950 Auto-Bus Crash Cause of Damage Suit

A $10,500 damage case was filed in circuit court Saturday by Edna Mattson, who lives near Redmond, Ore., and who was injured in a car-bus collision in Ashland on April 7, 1950.

The complaint seeks $10,000 general damages and $500 special medical damages from John W. Campbell Jr., driver of the car, and Henry J. Huber and L. P. Kelly, doing business as the Evergreen Bus line.

The woman suffered injuries to her shoulder and spine, according to the complaint, and alleges negligence on the part of both defendants. She was a passenger in the bus.

Medford Attorney Don Newbury filed the complaint on behalf of Attorney George Brewster, Redmond, who is the complainant's attorney.
