Second Veterans' Hour Radio Shows Scheduled Friday

Camp White—The second in a series of Veterans hour variety show and radio broadcasts will be presented here at 7:30 p. m. Friday, April 11, under the sponsorship of Myers-Holland Post 129, American Legion, Central Point.

The series is proving to be one of the most popular entertainment features at Camp White, sponsors said today.

This month's show will feature Jack McVea and his cast, now appearing at the Red Barn on Pacific highway south. The popular band will play through the cooperation of the Red Barn management, the local musician's union and the Legion. Other headline acts have been arranged, Legion spokesmen said.

Quiz Show
A quiz show for members of the domiciliary will follow the variety portion of the broadcast. Several prizes for correct answers have been donated by Medford and Central Point merchants, in addition to the jack pot prize, which will be doubled this time since it was not answered last broadcast.

A former New York entertainer now living here, and Jimmie Dunlevy of KYJC, will share the master of ceremonies position.

A program of the broadcast, which will be open to the public, will be announced later.

Portland — (U.P.) — Amos DeLam, 70, Portland, became Portland's 17th traffic fatality of 1952 when he died early Monday from injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile Saturday.

Washington Traffic Death Toll Down

Olympia — (U.P.) — Washington's 1952 traffic death toll so far totals 12 less than traffic fatalities during the same period of 1951, the State Patrol reported Monday.

Two traffic deaths during the week-end increased the total for the year to date to 111, compared to 123 at the same time in 1951.

Get Government Out of Business, NAM Speaker Says

Portland — (U.P.) — The real solution to this country's wage and price situation is to get government out of business and settle economic problems on a market free of controls, the president of the National Association of Manufacturers said Monday.

Steel Dispute Example
The official, William J. Grede, said the dispute in the steel industry was a good example of the government's inability to settle wage and price problems.

The 55-year-old official said he expected to testify before the House Banking and Currency committee this month that the Defense Production act, which sets wage and price controls, should be allowed to expire June 30.

Should Be Free Market
"My reasons are that I don't believe political action should be used to establish the market," Grede said. "There should be a free market."

"Furthermore," he went on, "DPA which was set up to control defense industries is also trying to control the other 80 per cent of U. S. production. If the act were allowed to expire, I don't think it would affect the defense program."

Two 'Firsts' Won In State Contest By Local Students

Medford senior high school students took two "firsts" in the annual state speech contest April 4 and 5 at the University of Oregon. One hundred fifty-one high school students, winners from the various districts, participated, according to De Vere Taylor, Medford senior high school speech instructor, who coached and accompanied the Medford entrants.

Dick Dickinson was first in oratory, and Steve Nye first in radio speaking. Dickinson also took second place in radio and Nye second in after-dinner speaking. The two as a debate team won third place. Lewis Bright took part in the poetry reading competition and Janet Coyle in humorous readings. McAllister also competed in extemporaneous speaking.

Many Firsts
By winning this first place in oratory, Dickinson has placed first in nine different contests during his high school career. As a sophomore he won oratory contests in district meets at Southern Oregon college, Linfield college and Willamette university; as a junior he won first in oratory at Southern Oregon and Willamette, and radio speaking at the annual state speech contest. In his senior year he has added firsts in oratory at the state meet and the Southern Oregon district American Legion oratory contest, and with McAllister, first in debate at the Southern Oregon district of Oregon high school speech league competition.
