German Orphan, 3, Arrives for New Home in States

Seattle —(U.P.)—A three-year-old German orphan arrived at the home of his new parents Wednesday after completing a "solo" flight which began in his homeland two and one-half days ago.

For the parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Paulgen of Seattle, it was the end of a dream which began nearly three years ago. They have no children of their own.

Found By Brother
"We thought we'd like to adopt a child from Germany," Mrs. Paulgen said, "so we wrote to my husband's brother, Arthur, who was over there. We asked him to find an orphan boy for us."

Arthur was finally successful. The lad was placed aboard the plane when it landed here last night, but it seemed an eternity to the Paulgens. The child was the last person off the ship.

Walt Worth Effort
But the wait was worth the effort. When the stewardess put the boy in Mrs. Paulgen's arms, she could hardly talk.

"He's going to be happy here," the father said.

They weren't too excited to give the boy a new name, however. From now on, he'll be known as Arthur William Paulgen.
