Senator Connally Hands in Retirement

Washington—(U.P.)—Sen. Tom Connally, the sharp-tongued Texan whose oratory has resounded through the capitol for 35 years, has decided to retire rather than face a still battle for reelection.

He said he was not willing to "engage in a bitter, arduous and taxing campaign" in order to seek six more years of the "crushing burden" of Senate responsibilities.

He has served in the Senate for 23 years and in the House for 12 years.

Dalles Dam Funds May Be Restored

Washington—(U.P.)—Senate sources predicted Monday that at least part of the funds cut by the house from The Dalles dam will be restored by the upper chamber.

The house struck $37,000,000 from the rivers and harbors appropriations bill which had been requested by President Truman for The Dalles dam on grounds that Indians' fishing rights had not been settled.

However, senate sources said there seemed to be no doubt that the senate would restore at least part of the amount. The sources also predicted that when the final figure is set in joint house-senate conference, money for the dam will be left in the bill.

"I think it will be the Giants and Yankees," she said. "The same players will star, too, although we'll certainly miss Joe DiMaggio."

Long-Time Follower
Miss Barrymore has been an ardent follower of the national pastime since she was a toddler of three.

"My father, Maurice Barrymore, started taking me to baseball games in New York," she explained. "He was crazy about baseball. He'd never heard about it until he came over from England."

"Certainly I understood what was going on at that age! I was told enough about it," she added tartly.

"After that introduction I went to the games every year. They didn't play at night in those days, so when I acted on Broadway I always went except for days I had to do matinees. I've seen several World Series, too."

Many Autographed Balls

Down the years she's been presented with many autographed baseballs which she's passed on to her children. She's had as friends such diamond greats as Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker and others, "but, oh, that was so long ago you wouldn't remember them."

The stately actress hasn't seen a big league game since she moved to Hollywood six years ago. She gets around to the Pacific Coast league games, and takes in the rest on radio and television. When she's working, radio blares the games in her dressing room on the movie sets. She can quote more batting averages and baseball anecdotes than the most sports-minded studio electrician or actor.

At home Miss Barrymore often repairs to her bedroom and stretches out on her king-sized bed to watch baseball on television. She listens to the radio and reads a book at the same time, too.
