Attends Community Chest Convention

Harold Cook, an officer of the Greater Medford Community Chest, attended the convention of Community Chest officers from throughout the state held in Salem earlier this week, he reported today.

Tony Manno, another officer of the local organization, was elected third vice-president and director of the State Chest, though not present at the meeting, Cook said. Jes Gard, Portland, was elected state president.

Cook said that there was considerable discussion of the so-called United Fund Appeals, now being organized throughout the nation, including Portland. He added that the Medford Plan has created considerable interest among fund-raising agencies, and many of those attending the convention questioned him about the unique organization.

Individual's Task In Politics Told To Medford Lions

Although politics have no place in a service club, the individual members of any service organization should be vitally interested in politics in order to see that the most qualified and best available men are placed in positions of responsibility in our local, state, and national governments, it was stated by Lou Hardin, Grants Pass, international counselor of Lions International, speaking here at the 27th anniversary of the founding of the Medford Lions club. The club was chartered on April 26, 1925.

He traced the history of the local club and cited the efforts that went into the promotion of Roxy Anne park, the local soup kitchen during the depression days, Hawthorne park, the sponsorship of Troop 3 of Boy Scouts, aid in boys and girls work in the community, and sight conservation activities, as evidence of the club's justification as a service organization.

 My progress continues to amaze me. Now I have a reader in Prairie du Chien, Wis. How would you pronounce that? ... Many jockeys wear St. Christopher medals. St. Christopher is the patron saint of travelers. The jockeys should wear Santiago medals. Santiago is the patron saint of horsemen.

Waiters
 Waiters at the leading midtown Manhattan places do very well financially. Many earn as much as $200 a week. Still they are not as well off as the New York waiters of thirty or more years ago. The waiters at Rector's, in that establishment's heyday, were paid $25 a month. They took in from $200 to $300 a week in tips with no income tax to pay. Most of them retired rich men. They usually bought apartment houses. In those days Manhattan real estate returned 20 per cent on the investment. The waiters at Rector's were unusual fellows. All were graduates of European colleges for waiters. Most of them spoke six or seven languages.

OH, THERE'S A heart for every one.

A furniture dealer questions my claim that Thomas Sheraton, the eighteenth century British furniture designer, originated twin beds. I am sticking by my claim with the usual stogies riding on the same. Sheraton's twin bed idea, however, has not been exactly followed. Full advantage of the old boy's designing genius has not been taken. Sheraton's twin beds could be drawn together at any time and made into a double bed. Some furniture company should put out some real Sheraton twin beds. I could improve on the idea by having mechanism providing for the beds to be drawn together or separated by pushing a button.

 Queries from clients. Q. Has there ever been a Yale University graduate who became a major league baseball player? A. Not many sons of old Eli have taken up baseball as a profession. But in the nineties there was a Yale man on the New York Giants named "Tots" Murphy. Offhand I can't think of any other major leaguer from Yale. Q. Do you remember a vaudeville act called the Pianophonds? Wasn't Jesse

Nine-Year Research Program Started On Fish Migration

Portland—(U.P.)—The Corps of Engineers announced Thursday it has undertaken a nine-year program of research to discover the most effective means of passing migratory fish both up and downstream over high dams.

Col. E. C. Itchner, North Pacific division engineer, said the program also would establish efficient, economical methods of operating fish facilities at present and future dams in the Columbia river basin.

Cooperative Program
 Itchner said the program would be conducted in cooperation with the Oregon Fish and Game commissions, the Washington state Fisheries Department, Washington State Game Department, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

He said fish facilities at Corps of Engineers' projects had become increasingly expensive, rising from a cost of about $7,500,000 at Bonneville dam to $20,000,000 at McNary and an estimated $30,000,000 for those under consideration for The Dalles dam.

"Fish facilities could be built more economically and operated with considerable savings to the government if more definite information regarding their limitations and requirements were known," Itchner said.

Cinder-Removal Suit Postponed Indefinitely

Portland—(U.P.)—The government's injunction suit against removal of cinders from land near Madras by a central Oregon contractor Thursday was postponed indefinitely.

Attorneys for the government and Samuel B. Rawson asked for an extension of time in which to prepare their cases. U.S. District Judge Gus J. Solomon granted the indefinite postponement.

The government seeks a permanent injunction to prohibit Rawson from taking the cinders from the tract which the government acquired under the Bankhead-Jones act of 1937.

Rawson sold the cinders for road construction material.

Troop Safety Lesson Seen in A-Bomb Test

Portland—(U.P.)—Lt. Gen. Joseph M. Swing, 6th Army commanding general, said Thursday one of the beneficial effects for the army from the Nevada atomic tests has been "to teach soldiers that they may save themselves if they follow procedures when under attack."

Gen. Swing arrived here to address a Portland Chamber of Commerce luncheon after viewing Tuesday's military maneuvers in connection with the latest atomic bomb explosion at Yucca Flat, Nev.

Swing said he could foresee a "tremendous potential in close ground support by atomic artillery" for troops but declined to discuss when such a weapon would be ready for use.

Washington Court Rules Real Estate Tax Legal

Olympia—(U.P.)—The state Supreme Court Thursday ruled 9-0 that the one per cent tax on real estate sales enacted by the 1951 legislature is constitutional.

The proceeds of the tax, levied by each county, plus equalization funds, mean about $13,000,000 a year to the state's school system, or about 12 per cent of the $104,000,000 budgeted for this school year.

ARSON UNINTENTIONAL
 McCook, Neb.—(U.P.)—McCook police solved a suspected case of arson when they found a 12-year-old boy who admitted he smoked after school each day, climbing into an automobile parked near the schoolyard to hide. On his last trip, however, he dropped a spark which burned out the interior of the car.

Hastings, Neb.—(U.P.)—A newcomer to Hastings reported his three-year-old son was responsible for a one-day delay in the family's moving plans. The boy put his mother's purse in one of the many boxes of household goods. The purse contained all the family's money and it took the remainder of the day to find it.
