Alexandria, S. D. —(U.P.)— A two-year-old boy, rescued after spending 67 hours in the swampy lowlands southwest of here, died of pneumonia, exposure and sunburn Tuesday.

Little Joseph Wipf had been found nearly exhausted in a plowed field a mile from the spot where he vanished from a group of playmates.

The youngster was found Monday lying curled up in the center of a plowed field near Alexandria, S. D., more than a mile from the spot where he became separated from a group of playmates Friday.

Rushed To Hospital

Hanson County Sheriff Dewey Heineman said Joseph was "almost dead" from exhaustion. The boy could not have lasted much longer, Heineman said.

Joseph was rushed to Mitchell Hospital where he was placed in an oxygen tent for a time. Later he was removed and fed water and broth to restore his strength. Planes Aid Search

More than 150 volunteers and four airplanes took part in an extensive air-ground search for the youngster.

It was feared that he had fallen into the swollen James river near where he had been playing when he disappeared.

The boy was found by Dave Waldner, Joseph was too weak to move when he was discovered.

The boy lives with his parents in a Mennonite colony near Alexandria.
