Portland Bakers Quit in Protest To Sunday Work

Portland—(U.P.)—Portland was added Monday to the list of Pacific Northwest cities in the grip of a baker's strike as 650 workers walked off the job in 27 plants here.

Some restaurants began cutting down on amount of bread served but no serious shortage was expected immediately. Many small neighborhood bakeries were not affected and large stocks of bread were placed in cold storage last week in anticipation of the strike.

Late Talks Fall

The strike was voted by the union Saturday after late minute talks failed to produce an agreement. They agreed, however, to continue negotiations during the strike. The Portland strike followed walkouts in Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma and Lewiston, Ida. Main issue is the Sunday shift. The union seeks an end to week-end work but employers say bread has to be baked on Sundays for the Monday trade.

Meat Cutters Plan To Seek Wage Boost

Chicago—(U.P.)—The AFL Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America planned Monday to seek an unspecified wage boost from the packinghouse industry.

Contracts covering some 125,000 AFL workers expire August 11. Union officials said they would also ask a union shop, a non-contributory health and welfare plan, improved pensions and other benefits. Similar demands are expected to be made by the CIO United Packinghouse Workers, representing 120,000 employees, in negotiations before its major contracts expire August 11.
