Man Confesses Bank Robbery From Pulpit; Pledges Police Aid

Topeka, Kan. — (UPI) — Al Johnson, 23-year-old sheet metal worker who confessed to a bank robbery from a Topeka church pulpit Sunday, set out Monday to help officers find his two accomplices in the four-year-old crime.

Johnson is free on $5,000 bond. Bank robbery has a 10 to 50-year prison penalty in Kansas. But he hopes for leniency.

Johnson said his mission now is to "preach the gospel" and to "tell all boys and girls how easy it is to fall into a life of crime."

The 230-pound, curly-haired man said "I had to give myself up to find peace."

He had planned to keep his identity secret until the Sunday morning service at Seward Avenue Baptist Church.

Although his name was disclosed Saturday night, Johnson went through with the public confession before the church congregation, television cameras and radio microphones.

Plans Second Confession
Johnson planned to make another confession to agents of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation.

"I can tell them the names of an older man and a younger man who took part in the bank robbery with me," he said. "I think the agents can find them when I tell them what I know."

The Hoyt, Kan. State Bank was robbed May 17, 1948, by three men. Two of them were believed dead from a car accident shortly after the robbery.

But these weren't the robbers, Johnson said. "I don't even know those men who were killed."

Held for Questioning
The FBI agents held for questioning a man identified as David Williams, arresting him shortly after Johnson confessed.

Williams denied any part in the robbery, officers said, but conceded he knew Al Johnson and had served two years on a highway robber conviction in 1948.

The robbery netted about $1,000, Johnson said, and his share was $335. Two weeks ago he sent $20 back to the bank, and during the week-end borrowed $315 from a friend to restore the rest.

LET YOUR LOVE MAKE A GO OF HER MARRIAGE

When a married woman falls in love with another man and he with her, the chances are that she will not try to make a go of her present marriage. She magnifies everything that goes wrong in her home and is convinced that everything will be much better if she marries someone else. That is what is facing the young man who wrote:

(Q) "I am in love with a girl who is married but doesn't love her husband. She has told him so. Every time she leaves him, her mother nags at her to go back and threatens to take her baby away from her. Can she do this? This girl loves her baby very much so she goes back to her husband. They fight and she is afraid of him. She wants a divorce to marry me. I love her and the baby very much. I have known her all my life and know her faults. Please advise me what to do."

(A) Let her try to make a go of her marriage. If you have known her all your life, why didn't you marry her before she married this other man? You have missed your chance and you should be a good sport about it.

Of course a woman will find the courtship of another man more exciting and glamorous than the responsibilities of a wife and mother. Your are making it difficult for her to settle down and adjust to these responsibilities.

While she is seeing you and you are telling her how anxious you love her and how much you are to marry her, she is going to find fault with things in her own home and quarrel with her husband. It certainly didn't help matters for her to tell her husband that she does not love him. If she felt that way, why did she marry him in the first place?

A woman who runs home to mother when something goes wrong in her home is immature and irresponsible. The chances are that she would behave the same way if you married her. The trouble lies within herself not in her marriage.

This young woman's mother cannot, legally, take her baby away from her unless she can prove that the daughter is an unfit mother. She is doubtless using it as a threat to make her daughter grow up and act her age. You are contributing to the trouble.

Chin Uppers Elect Meeting Delegate

Members of the Jackson county chapter of the Chin Up club Friday elected Harry Chipman, chapter president, as the chapter's delegate to the annual meeting of the national organization, to be held in Portland on Sunday, June 8. It was indicated that several chapter members also plan to attend the meeting.

The local chapter, composed of handicapped persons and others who are interested in the work of the handicapped, voted to continue meeting throughout the summer months, with July and August meetings to be held out-of-doors.

Mrs. Paul Lowery, secretary, was named chairman of a committee to make favors for the county fair and convalescent homes for the Fourth of July holiday. Her committee consists of Mrs. Bert Davis and Mrs. Henry Ruch.

A period of silence was observed in the memory of the late Max Peirce, who has aided the club in several ways and whose widow is a member of the local chapter.

Central Point Navy Man in Sea Action

Sonarman Third Class Theron Sutton Harris, son of Mrs. David L. Johnson, Grant road, Central Point, was aboard one of two U. S. destroyers which were slightly damaged by Communist shore-based artillery recently, Mrs. Johnson reported today.

The action, termed by the navy as the longest ship-to-ship artillery duel of the Korean war, resulted in slight damage to the destroyer USS Maddox and Lafayette. The vessels fired 730 rounds at the shore guns.

Harris attended Central Point high school in 1946, and has been in the service almost three years. His younger brother, Allen, is on Navy recruiting duty in San Diego.

The Navyman's wife is residing with her parents in Roseburg.

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY United Press Correspondent

Hollywood — (UPI) — Armchair explorer Ken Kripene went to South America to make one of those "startling" nature movies — but the natives were so interested in romance he had to star the snakes instead.

Kripene writes books on exploration, and "Burling Treasure," without traveling any farther from his beach cottage than to the library for a peek at maps and history books.

Finally he decided to see what the jungle really looks like. So producer Sol Lesser of the "Tarzan" and "Kon-Tiki" movies sent Kripene into the wilds of Peru.

While the drums of press agency beat a wild tom-tom into the Hollywood night, Kripene departed in a pith helmet to find a "lost emerald treasure" and "a city of naked women."

He found neither, he admitted Saturday.

Natives Too Lazy
Furthermore, the natives he wanted to photograph were so lazy from romance, the heat and no work that he filmed more colorful snakes and orchids instead.

"All they do is make love," he shrugged. "One tribe, the Ugas, just reach up and grab a banana in one hand and fish in the river with the other. They don't have to work."

"African natives at least cavort and jump around, wear costumes and have ceremonies. But these South American Indians don't have any ceremonies, not even a marriage. When a man wants to marry a woman he just hangs a necklace around her neck. If he wants a divorce, he breaks a twig.

No Colorful Dances
"I hoped we'd see colorful dances. But all they do is four slow steps forward and four backward. They hold a silly branch in one hand."

"They wear no clothing and they don't even live in villages. There will be one hut here and another five miles away. They're so primitive they haven't heard of the bow and arrow yet. They hunt with wooden spears."

Kripene filmed natives eating broiled snake, fried caterpillars and stewed monkey. Another scene shows a native, charged with adultery, thrown to his death in a snake pit.

Ate Their Food
"We ran out of our food and had to eat theirs," the frail, soft-spoken writer shuddered.

Producer Lesser will edit the interesting six hours of film into a 66-minute feature. And Kripene has retired to his beach home where he faces no worse peril than the California motorist. The natives there are livelier, too.

"I'm writing another book on buried treasure and I'm going to sit right at home and pull out reference books to do it," he said firmly.

ONIONS IN LOVE

Plant breeders have learned that in only one species of onion can the sex life be changed. Seed men have developed hybrids from this onion that yield up to 1500 bushels per acre compared to a national average of 200 bushels.

CHICKS
If you folks don't buy some of these nice straight-run chicks pretty soon, we'll have to fry 'em.

MOLLY & POLLY
The new additions to our store are beginning to perk up on their 1/6 lb. of Calf Manna per day. Come in and see these little pigs.

Attention Folks
Dr. E. M. Gildow, head veterinarian of the Carnation Milk Farms, will hold a meeting for dairymen and wives at the Medford Hotel, Thursday, May 8, at 8:00 P.M. Doc will discuss diseases, dairy management and program feeding. It will be well worth your while to join us at this meeting—don't miss it. Coffee and donuts will be served after the meeting.
