Funds for Books Sought by Library at Jacksonville

Jacksonville—Contributions for a fund to purchase up-to-date fiction and non-fiction books for rental at the Jacksonville library are being sought by Betty Boeglin, librarian. She believes organizations and individuals in Jacksonville as well as other parts of the valley, if informed of the need, will be willing to contribute.

Once the rental library is set up it should be self-supporting from fees, she said. The books, when they have paid for themselves, will be put on the regular shelves and the rental money will be invested in more new books for the rental department, the librarian pointed out. New books also will be acceptable for the new department.

Have $25 Yearly

The Jacksonville city council has allotted $25 a year for new books for children, Miss Boeglin said. There is a lack of children's books and a high demand, a great many children being disappointed to find they have read all the available books, she added.

Library hours are 1:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Mondays and Thursdays. Contributions may be made at the library during those hours or by writing the Jacksonville Library, U. S. hotel.
