Second Man Confesses To Part in Robbery Admitted in Church

Topeka, Kan. (U.P.)—A second person implicated in a four-year-old Kansas bank robbery by a young gunman who confessed his part in the crime from a pulpit Sunday was to be charged in connection with the holdup Tuesday.

David Williams, a 52-year-old itinerant farm laborer, admitted after 36 hours of questioning to being the "brains" behind the robbery which 23-year-old Al Johnson confessed from a Topeka church pulpit.

But it appeared that neither Williams nor Johnson would serve time for the May 19, 1948, robbery of the Hoyt, Kan., State Bank, an offense which carries a 10 to 50-year sentence on conviction.

The Kansas statute of limitations provides that no person shall be sentenced for a crime other than murder or treason after two years, unless the accused man has fled the state.

The four-year-old bank robbery case first broke last week when the Rev. Howard Brumme, pastor of the Seward Avenue Baptist church in Topeka, announced that an unidentified member of his congregation wanted "to get right with God and man" and would confess his part in the $1,000 robbery from the pulpit.

Kept Schedule
 A few hours before his public confession was planned, however, Johnson was identified to officers.

He implicated Williams.
