High Production Costs Offset Farm Returns

Washington (U.P.)—The Agriculture Department has reported that rising production costs more than offset the higher returns farmers received on their products in the first four months of this year.

The department said farmers received $8,700,000,000 for their marketings in the first four months—a 3 per cent gain over last year. At the same time, it said, farmers' production costs averaged 5 per cent higher.

The farm income report said that although farm output probably will be greater this year, lower prices and increased costs will keep farmers' net income about the same or somewhat smaller than the $14,900,000,000 level of last year.

Black Rose Disease Prevalent, Agent Says

Rogue valley rose growers were warned today to be on the lookout for a black canker disease on the stems of plants, according to C. B. Cordy, county horticulturist.

"The disease has only been scattered up until the last couple of years," Cordy said, "and for the first time this spring, the disease is jumping to new growth." He pointed out that the disease shouldn't be confused with frost damage which only browns the leaves and doesn't leave a canker.
