

Veterans Reminded Of Steps To Move
 To Higher Courses

Veterans training under the G.I. Bill were reminded today by the Veterans Administration of steps they must take in order to move up from their present courses to courses at the next higher level.

First, the VA said, they must apply for advanced training either before they complete their current course, or within 30 days following its completion.

Second, they must go ahead with their additional training either within 30 days after finishing their present courses, or on the first day that enrollment of students in their new course is permitted—which ever is later.

The normal summer vacation period doesn't count in such cases for veteran-students in colleges and other schools organized on a term, quarter or semester basis. A veteran, for example, who receives his AB degree in June, and who applies for graduate training in time, need not start his advanced course until the fall semester.

The VA said its rules apply to nearly all veterans in training under the G.I. Bill: Those discharged on or before July 25, 1947, who started their courses on or before July 25, 1951, cut-off date, and who have been in training since except for certain reasons beyond their control.

Veterans expecting to take advanced training under the G.I. Bill were urged to discuss their plans with the VA before the completion of their present courses.

AND THEN THE FUN BEGAN—Police officer Lester Ross (center) falls to the ground as striking bus drivers surge forward attempting to block auto at left. The car contains three trainees trying to enter the railway yard at Quincy, Mass. The strike has been under way for the past two months.

RESCUER BITTEN

Jackson, Miss. —(U.P.)—Lonnie W. Ratliff, aged 11, never will try to rescue a frog from a snake's mouth again. The boy was treated at Baptist Hospital for bites on his finger from what is believed to have been a water moccasin.

Feeding Family
 Articles Start
 In Mail Tribune

Mrs. Zola Vincent, nationally known foods writer will write a foods feature called "Feeding The Family" for readers of this newspaper beginning Thursday.

A resident of Oregon for 18 years, long vitally concerned with problems of feeding the family, Mrs. Vincent also does much to encourage teen-agers to experience the pleasure and satisfaction of knowing how to cook; believes that cooking is "a family affair."

Formerly foods editor of the New York Journal-American and of Parents' Institute Group of Magazines, Mrs. Vincent is now realizing a long-time desire to again live on the Pacific Coast and to write about western-grown products for western newspaper readers.

The new feature, "Feeding The Family" will appear each Thursday and will deal with nutrition in simple terms in relation to better health and diet for all the family. Recipes and suggestions are family-tested and perfected and include only such ingredients and household supplies as are readily available at local stores and at reasonable prices.

Information contained in the week-end market report is carefully garnered directly from state agriculture, dairy, fisheries and other sources enabling the reader to make the most of seasonal west coast-grown good things.

Ike Urges Prompt Unification Steps

Rome —(U.P.)— Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has warned Western Europe that it could have no lasting peace without unity and urged immediate steps to plan unification.

He spoke to members of the European Federalist Movement shortly before taking off for Paris, marking the end of a two-day farewell tour of Italy.

He told the group he believed Europe must rapidly carry out the Schuman Plan, convoked a European constitutional assembly and sign a treaty forming a European defense community.

EXCITEMENT TOO MUCH

Black Mountain, N. C. —(U.P.)— When a grass fire broke out at his sister's home here, J. E. McWhorter, 84, of Philadelphia, insisted on helping fight the fire. Suddenly he slumped to a sitting position and fell face forward in the flames. His death was attributed to a heart attack.

DOGS RAID HAMS

King, N. C. —(U.P.)— Wild dogs which have plagued this area for months, killing chickens and pigs, have become more discriminating in their tastes. Harold Calloway said when he went to his smoke-house six dogs ran out. They had eaten all but one of the prime cured hams.
