Police Rescue Two Girls From 350-Foot High Cliff

Niagara Falls, N. Y. — (U.P.) — Two college girls were rescued Saturday from the side of a 350-foot cliff of the Niagara River gorge two hours after they became "panicky" on a ledge while attempting to scale the cliff with a companion.

Rosemarie Burke, 18, Buffalo, and Marilyn Blake, 19, Niagara Falls, students at Buffalo's D'youville College, and Rose Bowen, 19, had been out for a walk along a wide path at the base of the cliff. A decision to take a short cut back to the Bowen girl's home by climbing the cliff led to their predicament.

When they were about 75 feet from the top they became convinced they could not make it.

The Burke girl finally decided to try. She fell and broke two teeth.

"Rosemarie was bleeding pretty badly and so Marilyn decided to stay on the ledge with her while I went back down the way we had come up," Miss Bowen said later.

"The Blessed Virgin got me through the dark. I don't know how I found the path, but I found it," she added.

When she reached the base of the cliff she phoned police, who climbed the cliff and helped the frightened girls back down to safety.
