

Mind Changed Too Late To Save Common-Law Husband From Trouble With Police

Wichita, Kan. — (UPI) — A willowy, 19-year-old blonde, who said she was "tired of being beaten by her common law husband and wanted him 'put away,'" changed her mind but the damage already was done.

In her anger, Camille S. Divish turned her diary over to police.

Dinner Meeting Set By Masons Friday

Medford Masonic Lodge 103, AF&AM, will hold a special dinner meeting, open to all members and their friends, in the Masonic Temple Friday evening, it was announced today.

A potluck dinner will be served at 6:30, followed by the stated communication of the lodge at 8 p.m. An open meeting, to which all are invited, will begin at 9 p.m., during which "Waves of Green," a documentary film saluting American agriculture and our land-grant colleges, will be shown.

For further information, members should consult their current trestle board.

Officers scanned its record of crimes committed in Cleveland, Nashville, Tenn., Bruceton, Detroit and Wichita, then promptly arrested Atlas Leon Morris, 26, Bruceton, Tenn., who Miss Divish said was her common law husband.

He admitted the burglaries. Camille was released by police Tuesday night, but not before she gave a statement detailing two years of crimes committed in four states they ranged from bank and post office burglaries to simple burglaries.

When it was all over, Camille announced she would remain in Wichita. "Look for a job and stick by him."

Earlier she had told officers, "I'm tired of him beating on me. I want him put away; he's a burglar anyway."
