New Service Club To Be Organized By Medford Women

Mrs. Verne Forsman, field representative for District 10, Altrusa international, announces the organization of a club for Medford. An organization dinner will be held Saturday, May 24, at 6:30 p. m., at Rogue Valley Country club.

Miss Dorothea Taylor, Seattle, district governor, and Miss Bernice Gardner and Miss Dorothy Hollingsworth, Portland, will assist with the ceremonies.

Altrusa, the oldest of women's classified service clubs, was organized in Nashville, Tenn., April 11, 1917. In August of that year, Altrusa incorporated, and became the first national organization of executive and professional women, either classified or unclassified.

Membership in Altrusa is exclusively for one outstanding representative of each particular business or profession; or women working in an executive capacity, within the territory of an Altrusa club, and is by invitation only, Mrs. Forsman states.

In the international organization, there are over 10,000 professional and executive women in more than 325 clubs throughout the United States, Canada, England, Mexico, Puerto Rico, Central America, and Asia, who work together to carry out Altrusa's program of service to foster community, state, national, and international betterment, according to the representative.

Like the men's service clubs, Altrusa always selects some worthwhile project in the community. They are interested in youth guidance, career conferences, job clinics for teen-agers, scholarships for college students, as well as public affairs and international relations.

One of the beneficiaries of Altrusa's international project is Miss Inez Posse Escot, a young Latin-American woman who is attending the University of Oregon in Eugene at the present time.

Clubs have been recently organized in Albany, Springfield, and Roseburg, Ore., the representative reports. Portland, Pendleton, and Salem also have Altrusa clubs.
