

Medford Student Is Named Winner Scholarship Grant

Miss Osello Caldwell, Medford High school senior, has been named winner of a $500 college scholarship awarded by Consolidated Freightways, it was announced here Saturday by Alva Perkins, manager of the freight company's Medford terminal.

Miss Caldwell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Caldwell, 6 Keenway drive.

Under the company's scholarship program, Miss Caldwell may attend any independent college of her choice, and she has indicated her intention of attending Whitworth college, Spokane. The scholarship is a cash award, and the college selected by each winner receives an equivalent $500 cash grant towards its general education budget. Six other high school seniors in Oregon, Washington and Idaho were awarded similar scholarships.

A seven-member scholarship board, representing business, industry and education, made the selections in Portland, where the company's home offices are located. The selection is based on scholastic achievement, record in school and outside activities and a short essay on the relation of the motor freight industry to the economy of their state. Students in each of the more than 800 communities served by Consolidated were eligible to compete, but only one applicant could represent each school. Ten states were represented in the competition.

This is the first year the motor freight firm has awarded the scholarships, which are to be on an annual basis.

Miss Caldwell is a member of Torch Honor society, Phi-Chem club, Spanish club and is a charter member of Tri-Dubs. She was one of the officers for student government day, this year, serving as park superintendent and is a former chaplain of Job's Daughters, Medford branch.

Visitors Here

Mr. and Mrs. Jack L. Carr of McMinnville, formerly of Medford, visited at the Fred R. Copey home, 1172 Stewart avenue, last week-end. They came here to be sponsors for the baptism of Jon Lorick, infant son of the Copeys. The Rev. George R. V. Bolster of St. Mark's Episcopal church officiated at the rite.

Business Women Meet at Station; Staff Men Speak

"The individual listener should never underestimate the importance of his own program preferences," Russ Jamison, program director of radio station KMED, told members of the Medford Business and Professional Women's club at their May meeting Thursday night. The meeting was held at the KMED studios on Ross Lane.

Citing as example "Friendship Circle," the popular KMED feature which has been continued in response to listeners' requests, Mr. Jamison urged members of his audience to express their own likes and dislikes. He also discussed the different types of radio programs currently broadcast.

The merchandising side of radio was described by Bill Hansen, commercial manager. Mr. Hansen emphasized the fact that his work is not so much to sell radio time and radio programs as it is to sell merchandise for radio advertisers. Ray Johnson, chief engineer and assistant manager at KMED, discussed legal and technical aspects of broadcasting. In the course of his talk he related amusing situations behind the expression, "due to circumstances beyond our control." He also answered questions concerning the prognosis for television in this region.

During the business meeting Miss Dana Platz, scholarship chairman, outlined the plan for making this annual award to a Medford high school girl graduate. Miss Laura York, vice-president of the Oregon State Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, led reports on the federation's recent convention in Klamath Falls.

Members of the news service and radio and television committee, of which Miss Helen E. Webster is chairman, arranged the program. Hospitality was in charge of the finance committee, headed by Mrs. Florence Lance.

Guests Here

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevenson and Mrs. Virgil Walker and daughter, Patricia, Malin, Ore., last week visited at the Clayton Walker home, 129 North Oakdale avenue.

Miss Eula Wintermote, (at left) home demonstration agent for Jackson county, is shown here with two foreign women who are visiting this country to study home extension methods. Miss Louise Homminger, (center) is from Linz, Austria, where she works with rural women, and Miss Truida Duyvendak, The Hague, Netherlands, is head of home extension work for city women in her country. Foreign Visitors Explain European Extension Plan

Goals of home extension programs in foreign countries are much the same as in this country according to two foreign workers who have been visiting in this county the past two weeks. The visitors, who left Saturday for Oregon State college, Corvallis, where they have been attending special classes, were Miss Louise Homminger, Linz, Austria, and Miss Truida Duyvendak, The Hague, Netherlands.

The two women are part of a group of European extension leaders spending several weeks in this country.

Miss Duyvendak, who heads extension work for city women in her country, states that "a higher level of living and education designed to make the family's money go further" are the aims of the extension program in her nation. She pointed out that "money is scarce" in the Netherlands since the nation lost many colonies, and that colonies, and that families must economize in as many ways as possible.

The extension head stated that under the extension program in her country courses are given in cooking, both elementary and advanced, and in sewing, particularly in the renovation of used clothing. Courses in the education of children are also given.

The courses are partly underwritten with government funds, but those enrolled also pay small fees, she said. In addition to the classes, organized along the line of adult education classes in this county rather than Oregon's extension program, written material is provided, Miss Duyvendak said. Those enrolled must be at least 21 years old, and courses cannot be given unless at least 15 people enroll.

Miss Duyvendak is particularly interested in the fashion in which lay extension leaders are trained in this country. This part of the program is yet to be worked out in The Netherlands, and she is of the opinion it will be most helpful. Classes for blind women are also new to the program.

Unlike Miss Duyvendak, Miss Homminger works with rural residents only. She explained that the extension program in her country was divided up into three classifications, information and consultation, organized classes and youth work similar to America's 4-H program, except it is for the 16 to 25 age group.

In addition to being trained in cooking, sewing and youth work, Miss Homminger also is trained to give advice on gardening problems. She explained that this is because the women of Austria do most of the gardening. Health and nutrition information is also given, she said.

Actually, the average Austrian family raises most of its food, she said, and buys only such staples as sugar, salt, coffee and tea. In Austria the women have meetings similar to unit meetings held here, she said, bringing lunches to be eaten at noon.

While here Miss Duyvendak was first a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Conger and later of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Heller. Miss Homminger was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Heitkamp and Mr. and Mrs. C. Schenck.

The group of visitors leaves Oregon for Oklahoma, West Virginia and Washington, D.C.
