Jefferson Davis' Costume Again Discussed in South

Jackson, Miss. — (U.P.) — "The capture."

Mississippi department of archives has a new question mark to consider in a matter over which history books have fought since 1865 — the costume worn by the Confederate president, Jefferson Davis, when he was captured by federal troops.

Northern political cartoonists portrayed the Southern leader dressed in women's clothing when caught May 10, 1865, at Irvinville, Ga. Southerners say he was wearing an ordinary Confederate uniform. Davis himself, in his memoirs, said he was wearing ordinary clothes with his wife's shawl thrown around his shoulders.

Now the archives department has received a shawl from Mrs. Bray Bradley Webster of Eaton Rapids, Mich., who claims it was the one Davis wore.

Shawl Brought Back

"My grandfather, Albert B. Bradley of Co. B, Fourth Michigan Infantry, brought it back," she said. "He said that although he was not actually with the group which captured Davis, he was with a regiment camped nearby."

"When the capturing officer, a Col. Pritchard, received word on May 23 to send the president's disguise to Washington, Mrs. Davis sent a waterproof cloak which was identified by men who had seen it at the time of

Hopes for Eventual Armistice in Korea Dwindles To Lowest

Tokyo — (U.P.) — Hopes for an eventual armistice in Korea dwindled to their lowest Sunday with the United Nations' failure to sell its "final proposal" to the Communists.

The outlook for peace was further clouded when an official Communist spokesman denounced Gen. Mark Clark's repudiation of the concessions granted to Communist prisoners of war for the release of Brig. Gen. Francis T. Dodd.

In Panmunjom, Vice Adm. C. Turner Joy told the Reds that the U. N. had gone "more than halfway" to settle the final deadlocks and refuses to go any farther.

North Korean Gen. Nam Il said the Communists would never accept the proposal in a lengthy reply termed "hysterical propaganda" by Joy.

A United Press correspondent at Munsan said the truce talks were "nearer failure than at any time since they opened." He said Joy's statement Saturday had an air of finality as he again refuted Communist charges of atrocities against prisoners of war.

Won't Change Stand

Joy said the U. N. command would never change its stand that only those prisoners of war who want to return to Red rule would be sent back. Nam re-

UN Infantrymen Plaster Enemy

Tokyo — (U.P.) — United Nations tank and infantrymen pushed into the "Iron Triangle" sector northwest of Kumhwa Sunday to plaster Communist troops building up for an intensive assault upon Allied positions.

Three Allied armored columns ranged throughout the area and blew up 83 Chinese bunkers in a series of raids that climaxed three days of joint tank-infantry operations to smash the threatening offensive.

Twin-engine B-26 attack bombers meanwhile threw demolition bombs and 50-caliber machinegun fire at enemy installations near Wonsan and the North Korean capital of Pyongyang.

The low-flying bombers knocked out 158 Communist trucks and 30 buildings during the assault, the greatest destruction claimed by the B-26 squadrons since February.

American F-86 Sabrejets flying cover for the attack bombers tangled with aggressive Communist MIG-15s.
