7th Company Vets Will Get Together Saturday Evening

Members of the old Medford 7th company Coast Artillery will get together Saturday, June 7, for one of their infrequent reunions. The meeting, at the Medford hotel, will start at 6 p. m. with a refreshment period. Dinner will follow, starting at 7:30. Veterans of the 7th company had their last reunion four years ago with 18 or 20 out of the 109 original members attending. It is hoped that an even greater number will be present Saturday and it is known that some former residents of the Medford area now residing elsewhere are planning to attend. Saturday's get-together will mark the 35th anniversary of the company's departure from Medford for Ft. Stevens in July, 1917. The company, which was commanded by Capt. A. J. Vance since deceased, was broken up after arrival at Ft. Stevens, its members being included in the 65th and the 63rd regiments of the coast artillery, before going overseas for service in WWI. Those who plan to attend the dinner should contact George Villas, telephone 2-8070, so that he may know how many dinners to arrange for.

Soil Conservation District Will Take Lead in Gathering Irrigation Plans for Valley

Sams Valley—The Sams Valley-Beagle Soil Conservation district will take the lead in assembling data which will be used to promote an irrigation plan for 12,400 acres of Sams Valley dry lands, according to the board of supervisors and landowners who met at the Grange hall June 3. It was pointed out at the meeting that there is insufficient natural flow of water in the Rogue river and its tributaries to supply for the 12,400 acres of new lands, but that there are potential storage sites where flood waters may be impounded and held off of the river. Engineers Support Plan Present at the meeting were state Engineer Charles Strickland and U. S. reclamation project planning Engineer Lee McAllister, both of Salem. The latter explained to the group that the reclamation studies previously made in connection with the Rogue basin would be made available to the district engineers, and Strickland said that the dry land in question "was so badly needed in our demand for increased production," that it would be "inconceivable" that it would be left without irrigation. A review of past plans and cooperative efforts to secure an approved plan for irrigation was made by State Sen. Ben Day, who emphasized the "economic necessity of developing irrigation for these dry lands." Pledge Aid Some 35 land owners pledged their support for the district's supervisors in their efforts to develop a plan in cooperation with the reclamation service and state engineer's office. Members of the board of supervisors are George A. Loftin, chairman, Gild Hill; Burdette L. Dodge, vice chairman, Medford; Earl B. Day, treasurer, Blue Moon ranch, Central Point; Frank Straus, Gold Hill, and Lester James, Central Point.

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—THIRTEEN

Court Dismisses Mandamus Action In Irrigation Case

Attorneys in the recent circuit court case involving condemnation of Applegate valley land for irrigation ditch purposes were advised this week that the state supreme court, on May 28, dismissed mandamus proceedings arising out of the case. Differences between the parties involved have been settled out of court, it was reported. It was also pointed out that a story in The Mail Tribune relative to the case said that Judge Orval J. Millard, Grants Pass, who conducted the first hearing in the matter, had been overruled by the supreme court. Such was not the case, the attorneys said, adding that the order suspending Judge Millard's decision was merely to give him an opportunity to present an argument on the law, to aid the supreme court in rendering a decision on the constitutionality of the law involved. History Given The attorneys gave a history of the case, which began in April, 1952, when Vivian Whitsett and others began condemnation proceedings for a ditch right of way across property owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ives L. Brown in the Applegate. They had Applegate river water rights, but their only access was across the Browns' land, and under the law in question they had the right to enter the land for ditching, providing they first obtained a court order and posted bond. Proper payment could be determined later by a jury. The hearing was conducted by Judge Millard, and he granted the order, and required the plaintiffs to put up bond, which they did. Contested Action The Browns contested the action on the grounds that the constitution requires that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation first being assessed and tendered. They applied to the supreme court for a writ of mandamus requiring the judge to set aside his order, or to show cause why he did not do so. However, before Judge Millard could prepare his answer, which was to have been studied by the supreme court in its decision on the constitutionality of the law, the parties settled their differences, and applied for a dismissal of the condemnation proceedings in the circuit court, and the mandamus proceedings in the supreme court. The dismissals both were granted. Mr. and Mrs. Brown were represented in the action by Attorneys Hugh Collins and Paul Haviland, and the plaintiffs were represented by Roberts, Kellington and Branchfield.
