Photographers, Radiomen Seeking Ringside Seats For Tuesday GOP Meeting

Chicago — (U.P.) — Photographers, movie cameramen and radio reporters Saturday fought for permission to attend a crucial meeting of the Republican National Committee to choose between contested delegations to the GOP convention.

The national committee will make an original decision on the contested state delegations, but the convention as a whole, which convenes July 7, will be the final court of appeal.

Some Assured Place

Newspaper and press association reporters already were assured that the meeting next Tuesday will be open to them. But it still had not been determined whether cameramen and radio reporters using recording devices would be permitted to work while the meeting is in progress.

"The committee is anxious to avoid the confusion of exploding flash bulbs and the circus atmosphere of movie lights and microphones," a spokesman said.

Only Reporters

"Right now it looks as though only reporters will be permitted to hear the proceedings."

Several news picture and movie news organizations protested to National Republican Chairman Guy Gabrielson, demanding that the meeting be thrown open to them.
