

Petitions To End Daylight Time in Oregon on File

Salem — (U.P.) — Completed petitions for an initiative measure to outlaw daylight time in Oregon were on file Tuesday with Dave O'Hara, head of the State Elections bureau.

The petitions were presented Monday by Ben Buisman, representing the Oregon State Grange. Accompanying him were representatives of the Oregon Farmers Union and the Oregon Farm Bureau Federation. All three farm groups joined in circulating petitions to ban last time in Oregon.

Individual Not Affected

Under provisions of the measure, standard time would be mandatory in Oregon. However, observers point out that the mandatory provision would apply only to state, county and municipal offices and activities.

They said there is nothing to keep a businessman or any individual from setting his watch or clock at any time he pleases.

31,745 Signatures

The completed petitions contained 31,745 signatures. If 26,286 are found to be those of valid registered voters, the measure will go on the November general election ballot.

The filing deadline is 5 p.m. PST Thursday.

Preliminary petitions have been filed for 19 initiative measures. O'Hara said he doubted if completed petitions for more than seven of the measures would make the Thursday deadline.

Uranium Plant May Face Strike

Oak Ridge, Tenn. — (U.P.) — A possible strike at the world's biggest plant for non-stop uranium production for atomic bombs hung in the balance of deeply snarled contract negotiations Tuesday.

Work shifts began on schedule despite a previous midnight strike deadline but some 2,000 United Chemical Workers CIO planned to call a walkout at first sign the negotiators are giving up.

The threatened strike would be the first ever to occur at the sprawling K-25 gaseous diffusion plant, world's biggest plant for continuous production of uranium 235 used in atomic bombs.
