Old St. Mary's School Building To Disappear

The St. Mary's school building's 44-year service as a high school and convent is soon to end. Building inspector's office records show that a permit to demolish the old school has been taken by Sacred Heart church. In 1908 the academy, as it was known until recently, was moved to the then-new building at 321 West 11th street, according to the Very Rev. John M. Berger. Previously St. Mary's academy had been in Jacksonville, where it was established in 1865. It was moved when Medford became more heavily populated than Jacksonville.

Original Enrollment 116
The school's original enrollment at the 11th street site was 116, with 23 boarders and 93 day students, Father Berger said. The registration this year was over 400. The old building is giving way to a new, larger school being built on the same property. Father Berger said he expected the new building to be completed and ready for operation by fall.

The new building has been built virtually around the older building. The L-shaped building has been constructed along Ivy and 11th streets between the old school and the sidewalks. More Floor Space

Although the old school had one more floor than the new one, it had hardly half the floor space. The building under construction will have nearly an acre of floor space—43,000 square feet. The building soon to be demolished had only 25,000 square feet.

Father Berger said demolition of the old building will begin when salvage arrangements are completed.

MEDFORD (OREGON) MAIL TRIBUNE—SEVEN

Around Hollywood

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Correspondent

Hollywood (U.P.)—"The Craziest House in America" is a castle made out of movie sets with underground tunnels and a fireplace under the bed.

This home is occupied by electronics engineer Mac Brannard. It was built in the racy 20's by screenwriter Jack McDermott. He penned Harold Lloyd and Colleen Moore movies by day and was one of the first of the high-living Hollywood characters by night.

McDermott set up a big piano box as a house in the Hollywood hills in 1921. One day he spied an old set of an oriental temple at his studio, and reflected on what a fine room it would make. He hauled the set by burro to his hillside home. From there on his architectural problem was solved.

McDermott borrowed another movie set that had been a Hansel and Gretel witch's hut. The dining room of his home is the captain's cabin of a Spanish galleon on which Doug Fairbanks leaped about in "The Black Pirate." Another room boasts minarets from "The Thief of Bagdad," a gift dome is from a movie about Kubla Kahn.

Underneath "The House That Jack Built," is a labyrinth of tunnels. One tunnel staircase spirals up to a mirrored bedroom with a fireplace under the bed. Another winds up next to the living room fireplace. Legend has it that McDermott would beat on a drum while shapely girls in harem outfits drifted out of the trapdoor at parties attended by John Barrymore and other Hollywood characters.

The writer built patios, fountains, rooms and a huge swimming pool of hand-painted tile without any financial distress. He wrote French and Italian tile dealers that he was a dealer himself, and please send him free samples. He got $7,000 worth that way.

The house has four antique cannons out front and an ear-splitting siren in the bathroom. By the pool is a tile monument, topped by a throne. Once McDermott furnished female guests with swim suits that dissolved in water.

His favorite gag was taking friends up the mountain road in his model T Ford. If a nervous passenger complained, the writer would hand him the detachable steering wheel and continue driving with unseen foot controls.

McDermott took a fatal overdose of sleeping pills six years ago. A year later a crank set fire to part of the flimsy house, and Brannard bought what was left.

Controls Removed on Specialty Cheeses

Washington (U.P.)—Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan has removed import controls on Roquefort and about 100 specialty foreign cheeses.

But he imposed new mans on imports of malted milk compounds and substitutes for milk and cream. Brannan acted Thursday under provisions of the new controls law signed Monday by President Truman. The law permits Brannan to end import restrictions on certain non-competitive products and to increase quotas up to 15 per cent for competitive products.

M'Arthur Threatened With Act Violation

Washington (U.P.)—Attorney Harrison Mann has threatened to charge Gen. Douglas MacArthur with violating the Hatch Act if MacArthur carries out his role as keynoted of the Republican Convention.

Mann, former chairman of the suburban Arlington, Va., Democratic executive committee, wrote MacArthur that the Hatch Act—which prohibits federal employees from participating in political activities—makes no exception for members of the armed forces.

There was no immediate comment from MacArthur.

FEED STORE GOSSIP
By Paul E. Wilson
BI-FOCALS FOR BULLS
After two of his friends had been killed by bulls, Henry Masbruch of Platteville, Wis., invented a blind fold bull halter with "bifocals," allowing the bull to see downward to graze, but blinding him when he lowers his head to charge.

ALBERT
The newest addition to our store, is a mighty fine bull calf. He is cross bred, having a Holstein Mom and a Hereford Pop and he has a clean white face to prove it. Albert was born June 23, 1952, and was on the cow until Saturday, June 25, when he was brought into the store. He has had no milk since we have had him and he will get none. He is getting calf manna and water and that is all. We'll pick up some grass hay for him today to nibble on, then when he is old enough for a little grain, he will start getting some Alberts Crowd with his calf manna.

CATTLEMEN
Of the Cal-Oregon Hereford Association, don't forget that your Fitting Ration is now available here at the store and those bulls should be getting on feed, as the time is slipping by mighty fast.

PULLETS 5 TO 5 1/2 LBS. COME INTO LAY AT 15 WEEKS
Had a call from Mary Lappin saying her pullets were starting to lay. Checking back we found these pullets to be only 15 weeks old. Now normally we do not like to have pullets come into lay that early but in going out to Lappin's we found the pullets to be fully developed and weighing 5 to 5 1/2 lbs. Mary and Hugh have done a real job on these pullets and have followed the Alberts Plan all the way. Nice going Mary and Hugh.
