Copco's Big Bend Dam Goes To Commission

Klamath Falls—(U.P.)—The fate of the California-Oregon Power Company's Big Bend dam No. 2 was in the hands of the Federal Power Commission Saturday. The commission has completed hearings on the dam which Copco seeks to build on the Klamath river 19 miles downstream from Klamath Falls but an announcement of any decision is not expected for many months. Still pending is a decision from the Oregon Hydroelectric Commission which held hearings on the dam nearly a year ago.

Hottest issue in the PUC hearing was water use with agriculture interests contending that there would not be enough water left in the stream for irrigation if the power company took the 1250 second feet it said it needed to generate electric power.

Aid for Cancer Research Devised

San Francisco—(U.P.)—An aid to finding out why cancer spreads through body tissues has been devised by Dr. J. F. Rinehart, pathologist at the University of California hospital.

The announcement was made by the American Cancer Society, which supports research at the university and its hospital with an institutional research grant. Dr. Rinehart has devised three new stains which will aid in discovering how cancer manages to penetrate tough connective tissue, known as basement membrane, one type of which separates skin from underlying tissues. This ability gives the disease its invasive quality.

Dr. Rinehart stains tissues and, under the microscope, attempts to determine whether the basement membrane is defective in the early stage of cancer development, permitting cells to break through.

He also will make chemical tests to see whether some compound in the tumor reduces the tough restraining membrane to a jelly-like or watery consistency as the cancer moves into adjacent tissues. Some scientists believe that tumors possess a "spreading factor" which has such an effect.

Rare Disease May Hit Swine Crop

Chicago—(U.P.)—A once rare disease is expected to cause heavy losses in the nation's pig production this season, officials of the American Veterinary Medical Association said.

The disease, which usually appears in baby pigs, has become so widespread it is now one of the most serious swine problems in the United States. AVMA officials said the disease, called infectious rhinitis, is taking a place with such problems as cholera, erysipelas and transmissible gastroenteritis.

Few animals are killed outright but rhinitis can stop gains to the point where hog raising is no longer profitable.

Unlike non-contagious bull nose, which is frequently confused with rhinitis because of sneezing and pushed-in noses of the pigs, rhinitis is extremely infectious.

Association authorities said careful selection of breeding stock and feeder pigs from clean herds will keep rhinitis off the premises.

GOP Orders Signs Down In Hotel Neutral Zone

Chicago—(U.P.)—Neutrality is rare, but does exist, in the Conrad Hilton hotel headquarters for the Republican National convention.

Backers of Sen. Robert A. Taft found one "No Man's Land" Saturday when they posted signs in the grand stairway leading to the mezzanine reception centers of both the Taft and Eisenhower forces.

They were removed quickly because they are barred in that area.

Another neutral zone, dictated by the Republican publicity chief William Mylander, is a large space set aside in the basement press headquarters for press conferences. Campaign placards are expressly forbidden.

Bremervhagen, Germany—(U.P.)—Fire broke out Saturday aboard the U. S. troop transport Gen. Maurice Rose, with 1625 soldiers and dependents aboard, but was quickly quenched. The ship was completely "out of danger," the U. S. Navy announced Saturday night.

A Navy spokesman said the engine room fire was first reported at 1 p. m. EDT. By 1:20 EDT, it had been extinguished by members of the crew.

The Rose was scheduled to dock here Sunday bringing 1,200 enlisted men and 425 officers and dependents from the United States.
