Harry and David Announce Manager

The "Harry and David" organization today announced the appointment of R. A. Patterson as manager of the commercial fruit sales division.

Prior to joining Bear Creek orchards, Patterson was, for many years, manager of the Oregon-Washington-California Pear bureau.

His former position has given him a broad background of experience in the marketing of fresh fruit in all of the important eastern markets, the announcement said.

In addition to his sales experience, Patterson was, for 18 years, an active grower of pears and peaches in the Placerville, Calif., area.

David H. Holmes stated that the entire fruit industry, as well as Bear Creek orchards, would benefit by the addition of Patterson as a resident of the Rogue River valley.

HOPEFUL GOV. WARREN will wind up as Republican nominee if Senator Taft, Gen. Eisenhower forces deadlock. California's delegation to national convention leaves Oakland. At right on train is Joseph R. Knowland, newspaper publisher and longtime political patron of Warren. (International)

OUT OF THE WOODS By Jim Stevens

The Weyerhaeuser Century

A hundred years of history was in focus on the big mill at Everett during its week of open house to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Weyerhaeuser operation in the community. Characteristic reticence held the observance to local life.

Actually this is the Weyerhaeuser centennial year. For it was in 1852 that a German immigrant who was yet in his teens took a job at stacking lumber for 12 hours a day in a Rock Island, Ill. sawmill. Before long he was selling lumber. And in a little while a mill-owning group was asking him to come in as executive partner.

Another German giant of the day in America had come to America as a refugee from the revolution of 1848. He settled in Wisconsin, entered politics as a leader of the new Republican party, eventually was appointed Secretary of the Interior. And so Carl Schurz fathered the forest reserve policies which were the roots of our present national forests.

Such matters of history were in my mind as I joined one of the groups that were guided on Mill B tours at Everett, to see the new hydraulic log barker, the big chipper, and other modern wonders of an integrated forest industry operation plan. No Alligators or Burners

Close to 10,000 grandpas, dads, moms, small fry, ditty babes and humans unclassified were taken up and down steep stairs and over tracks and planks of Mill B during the week of open house. A barked shin with a stocking run as a by-product was the only reported injury. A stack of stories was salvaged by the fair girl guides. One was of a visiting lady from the Louisiana timber country who was cheering at every turn. When she looked out over the log booms she cried, "The boom men up Nawth do have it good—no alligators!"

I'll tell you what I missed, with glad cries and big smiles. Back in the 1920s I described the night sawmill scene at Everett many times in short stories. Seen from a boat on the Sound or from the eastward heights the giant red, glowing eyes of the burners made the night view appeal powerfully to the imagination. The Mill B burner fell long ago, like Goliath before David's slingshot—the woodpulp industry and other new agencies of utilization being the David in this case.

Integration, they call it. But there's more to it than abides in just that word. It means plants, manufacture, sales, distribution, features visible like the trunk and branches of a tree. The roots are deep. They have been long growing. They are in a history of human relations through innumerable partnerships and creative management programs. Their vital character abides in the word "co-operation."

Co-operation and Integration

The United States suffered a nationwide financial panic in 1858. An Illinois lumber company failed. The creditors urged young Frederick Weyerhaeuser to join them as executive partner. History repeated itself with him from that time on. The record reveals him as a man of business who inspired full faith and trust at contact. Others sought him out, endlessly. It was James J. Hill who came to Frederick Weyerhaeuser in the 1890s, asking him to buy Northern Pacific forest land on the West Coast.

Cooperation plus integration is the way that has led to the Weyerhaeuser operations of today from the wages earned by a teen-age German a century ago in Rock Island, Ill. Certainly it is one of America's great industrial stories. As a historical figure of the forest industries Frederick Weyerhaeuser stands alone, utterly unrivaled. The position was not attained by having a giant's strength and using it like a giant. The strength was in character, in genius for integrating co-operative enterprise.

Music Program Used In Mental Therapy

Dannemora, N. Y. (U.P.)—An organ recitalist commenting on the fine tenor voice of a hospital inmate was amazed to learn he was a convicted murderer.

In fact, all 12 members of a choral group she heard were convicts. The program was part of a unique experiment in mental therapy at Dannemora State Hospital.

In the belief that music would help some of the hospital's 400 prisoners return to reality, a series of organ recitals were arranged. The first concert of classical and popular selections was enthusiastically received by the inmates.

The choral group was formed and prisoners now join in community singing.

STUMBLES AT LAST
Fort Worth, Tex. (U.P.)—Lester Fox, who has driven 175,000 miles in 35 years without getting a traffic ticket, got one this year for going 40 miles an hour in a 30-mile zone. The day after getting the ticket, Fox got a five-year safe driving award from the Soil Conservation Service, where he works.
