74,608 Visit Museum Since Doors Opened

Jacksonville—Visitors in the number of 74,608 have registered at the Jacksonville Museum since the doors were opened on July 9, 1950.

Figures for the two fiscal years, which ended Wednesday, were made public today by the curator, Mrs. Myrtle P. Lee who said visitation increased greatly in the second year. So far this spring and summer the number entering the museum has been particularly large on Sundays and the throngs have included thousands of tourists and other out-of-town people, according to the curator.

The little eye catchers that women love, like tucked vestees, double revers, pretty detachable pique, are money-saving ways of perking up an old dress. To keep them clean, wash them in bleaching, hot suds and add a small amount of bluing wax ironing aid to the hot starch. This gives the finishing touch that speaks success.
