Anti-Hail Pilot Corrects Article

Eugene Kooser, one of the pilots under contract here to seed clouds in attempts to prevent hail, said today that a story in Sunday's Mail Tribune misconstrued a report he had made regarding a flight made Friday.

The story said a hail-threatening formation might have come into the valley unless seeded, but Kooser pointed out that what he had said was that hail from the cloud might have come into the valley. The cloud formation was not headed this way, he added, and seeding would have no effect on its direction.

However, hail sometimes is thrown from such high clouds for great distances, he pointed out. It was against this threat that the seeding flights were made, Kooser said.
