Pickin' Pears News, Gossip, Comment From Camp White

By SID HOLLINGSWORTH

The story of the Oregon Trail and the settlement of the Oregon country is an illuminating chapter of American history. Much has been accomplished in the Northwest since the battle cry of "fifty-four forty or fight" in a war that was never fought having been compromised and adjusted in a boundary which has not been violated in more than a century of peace between neighbors.

As a youth this writer came to the northwest with the U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey and crossed that boundary in northern Idaho and Washington to join the line of levels with Canada. At that time when the rumblings of world war were first being heard, the peaceful ways of life of the communities were noteworthy. Trouble with "wobblies" and itinerants made it even difficult for rough looking characters like surveyors to come to town.

That was, of course, before the arrival of motor cars and surfaced highways. And looking back today it would seem that no other development of the age has transformed the people in their respective ways of life more than the automobile. It makes travelers of everybody so that all of the people are intruders and visitors part of the time. The change in transportation means has brought about a real crisis with the familiar setting of the past.

It is with something close to sadness that we who have watched these changes in the times find the transition affecting the conveniences in and out of Medford by the conversion of the rail line first to a branch, and then to curtailment of passenger service altogether. And with heavy duty trucks and buses utilizing the highways it is significant to observe the means used by the state to check the weight of such vehicles. There is such a checking station at the entrance to the Camp White Domiciliary which is kept busy with the logging trucks that stream along the highway.

The point of this review is to call to mind the picture in the days before the wars of this century began. In those days the S.P. hauled a string of cars over er Siskiyou Pass by two engines. They crept along very slowly and people using the dirt highway, which was just as tortuous and tedious, could make faster time than the train. Another route over the mountains even then could be seen as inevitable. In this highway trip, there were hazards like falling trees which did not affect the railroad. In a spring wind storm in the Shasta region, we encountered a dozen big trees athwart the road with the only passage provided by a crew that dug the way clear underneath the trees. Some of the roads were improved in those days and it is recalled that Oregon highways were protected and improved by blackened planking laid across the surface at a 45 degree angle which permitted a fair degree of speed.

Today, from a transportation standpoint, we are becoming bus and automobile conscious, and partly air conscious. Every day and Sunday, Camp White is serviced by a bus, with four round trips. The government provides busses to bring entertainers out and to take members on occasion to Medford ball games and special functions, and a bus is provided for the weekly fishing trip as well as other trips.

Personnel and members have their own cars and about 300 are parked in the spaces reserved for them around the station. The American Red Cross each summer conducts tours throughout the Rogue River Valley in station wagons driven by members of the motor corps. These are familiar jaunts to historic and interesting spots that are well enjoyed.

Greyhound and Trailways busses now are depended upon to carry the veterans to and from the Domiciliary when they go on furlough if they are not fortunate enough to own a car. Time and tide, it appears, have passed a milestone in public conveyance without much shedding of tears.

Olympia—(U.P.)—The Washington, Supreme Court Monday unanimously upheld the constitutionality of a law requiring all political candidates in the state to swear they are not subversive.

Gain new vim...new joy in life!

There is no need for you to be tired, nervous, cranky or disappointed if due to dietary deficiencies which occur only when the daily intake of B-vitamins and Nicotin is less than minimum requirements over a prolonged period. These non-specific symptoms do not in themselves prove a dietary deficiency and may have other causes or be due to functional conditions.

BEXEL SPECIAL FORMULA, the wonderful new vitamin compound, may be exactly what you need to put you on your feet again if you...like so many, many others...are suffering from common symptoms of specific deficiencies.

With all the medical knowledge of vitamins now made available by science and health research, it is senseless for you to continue feeling excessively weak and over-fatigued, all jittery and nervous.

Where such conditions are due to lack of B-vitamins, iron and trace minerals known to be essential in human nutrition, Bexel may be the "miracle drug" you are looking for to put you in tip-top shape again!
