

Rebellious Southerners Seated Without Taking Loyalty Pledge

Chicago —(UP)—Three rebellious Southern states won the right to vote in the Democratic Convention Friday without signing a "loyalty" pledge which they refused to swallow at the risk of being thrown out of the party.

The action apparently ended the possibility of a convention bolt by anti-Truman Southerners who had threatened to shatter Democratic unity in the face of an anticipated Dixie invasion by GOP nominee Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Long Floor Fight

The South Carolina, Virginia and Louisiana delegations were restored to full membership by vote of the convention after a blistering floor fight which raged into the early hours of the morning.

Harmony-seeking middle-of-the-road Democrats lined up behind the three hold-out states to hand the liberal wing of the party a sound thrashing. Backers of Averell Harriman and Sen. Estes Kefauver, D-Tenn., angrily charged that sponsors of the Stevenson draft "made a

Vernal Assurances Given

Standing solidly on their refusal to sign even a watered-down "loyalty" pledge engineered by Northern liberals, the three states were seated after giving verbal assurances that the party nominees to be named today would appear on the ballot in their states in November.

Bold threats of a new Southern uprising have been voiced by Govs. James F. Byrnes of South Carolina, Herman Tamm of Georgia and Hugh White of Mississippi, all bitter foes of federal civil rights and other cardinal features of the Fair Deal.

The Southerners, most of whom backed Sen. Richard B. Russell, D-Ga., came to the convention hoping to recapture control of the Democratic party with the implied bolt threat as part of their strategy.

Showdown Forced

Governors of the three states—Byrnes, Robert F. Kennon of Louisiana and John Battle of Virginia—forced a showdown Thursday. They sent a joint letter to Convention Chairman Sam Rayburn asking if "we are, or are not, members of the convention."

The test came when Louisiana's name came up in the roll call for presidential nominations. Battle, amid boos, formally asked for a ruling. With great reluctance, Rayburn, a Texan, said the three states could not vote because they had not complied with the loyalty requirement.

Based on Statement

Rep. Lansdale G. Sasser, D-Md., asked that Virginia be seated on the basis of a statement by Battle that Virginia law required the Democratic nominees to be placed on the ballot. In a noisy, two-hour roll call, Virginia was seated by a vote of 615 to 529 after a number of states, including Illinois, switched enough votes to assure victory for the Virginians.

A short time later, Battle moved that Louisiana and South Carolina be seated. Rep. John McCormack, D-Mass., who had taken the chair, put the motion to a voice vote and declared it passed.

Lower Bartlett Price Believed in Prospect

Prospects are that Bartlett pear prices will be lower this year than last, it was reported by the Portland Oregonian today after it received reports from California markets.

The Oregonian said that reports are that California canners are paying $50 a ton on a day-to-day basis without a contract

Saturday Radio Broadcast Planned On Jacksonville

Jacksonville — Historic Jacksonville and the Jacksonville Gold Rush Jubilee will be featured Saturday on a radio program to be carried by the National Broadcasting company, sponsors of the jubilee said today. The program will be broadcast on the NBC network at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and will be re-broadcast here at 2:30 p.m. Sunday by radio station KMED, the local NBC outlet.

Script for the half hour broadcast was written in part by Mrs. Robert Holcomb, Shady Cove, who also appears on the program. Others taking part in the program include Dick Spain's band, the Methodist Church choir, under the direction of C. R. Adamson; the Catholic Men's choir, under the direction of Father C. J. Linehan; Vic Flood, the Harmonaires, "The Three Notes and Dad," Ruth Kilbourn and other Footlighters players and "Scotty Matheny."

Also taking part in the program are Announcers Bud Beachwood and Chuck Field, Russ Jamison, assistant producer; Jennings Pierce, producer and narrator; Roy Johnson and Don Smith, technical producers, all of KMED.

The program pictures the hardships of the pioneers and traces the background of some of the historic items located in the Southern Oregon Historical society's museum in Jacksonville.

for canning Bartletts. This is about $30 less than the California price paid to Oregon and Washington growers last year.

Some canners were said to be buying on an open contract, with prices to be named later. One firm had started shipping California pears to Portland for processing there.

Court Advisory Group Sets Monday Meeting

The Jackson County Juvenile court advisory committee is scheduled to meet Monday evening, July 28, at 8 o'clock in the circuit court rooms of the courthouse, it was announced today.

The advisory committee is composed of representatives from civic and fraternal organizations in the county, and each group is requested to send a delegate to the meeting, according to Mrs. Victor Birdseye, chairman of the committee. Anyone interested is invited to attend, she added.

The meeting is to include a report of the nominating committee, a report from the juvenile officer procurement committee and action on the recent survey of detention facilities.

3 Trucks Crash, Block Junction

Traffic was partially tied up for a considerable period last night when three trucks were involved in an accident at the intersection of Highways 99 and 62 north of Medford, the state police reported.

In the accident were a pickup truck driven by Sidney Jones, 324 South Central avenue, a logging truck driven by Lawrence Darrell South, Central Point, and a truck driven by John Wesley Eads, 722 Broad street. Jones' pickup was badly smashed, but there were no injuries and no citations issued, the police said.

Eads was driving north on Highway 99 when the traffic light changed and his brakes failed. His truck, owned by Johnny's Signs, Central Point, sideswiped the south-bound logging truck, causing it to swerve into the pickup, police said. Jones was stopped on Highway 62, waiting for the traffic signal to change.

There were two passengers in Jones' truck — Delbert Boyd, Biddle road, and Janet Prowell, 1468 South Columbus avenue.
