As We Live...

By DR. ELIZABETH HURLOCK
PARENTS DESERVE HAPPINESS IN THEIR DECLINING YEARS

When parents are coming to the end of their lives, their happiness should be their children's first consideration. This may mean sacrifices for their children but the sacrifices are usually far less than the parents made for them. That is the way this young woman should look at the problem she writes about:

(Q) "My parents are getting along in years. Dad has a small pension but it is not enough to keep them in their home. My two brothers and I are all married with families of our own. We feel that we have enough to do to keep our own families and can't help our parents. We think they should sell the house and live in quarters they can afford but they want to stay in their own home. What do you advise us to do?"

(A) You and your brothers should make it possible for your parents to stay in their own home until their health is such that they cannot live there alone. After all they have done for you and your brothers, the least you can do is to try to make their old age as happy as possible.

Dr. Hurlock There are certain things you and your brothers can do that will help your parents but will not be too great a financial burden to you. If their home is large enough to accommodate one or two roomers, perhaps you could locate a congenial elderly person or a young business man or woman who could live in their spare rooms. If they granted their roomers kitchen privileges, or if your mother were willing to prepare one or two meals a day for them that would bring in a tidy sum for them.

You and your brothers, if you have young children, could have your parents stay in your homes occasionally while you went out or went away for a short vacation. Instead of paying someone else to baby-sit, you could give the money to your parents.

Domestic Job Suggested
Another source of income for them would be if you could get some mending, cookie or cake making job for your mother. Most women of her generation are skilled in domestic arts and there is a great demand for such things today. This would be work she would enjoy and it would not overtax her strength. It would give her the feeling of independence that always pleases an elderly person.

Dr. Hurlock will help you with family problems. Write her in care of this newspaper.

Pork Prices Get Higher Ceilings

Portland — (U.P.) — From now on it will cost more to eat pork, according to District OPS Director Carl C. Donough.

Higher OPS ceiling prices of from one to eight cents a pound on lean pork cuts became effective Tuesday. The ceilings were authorized until October 31.

The higher ceilings, Donough said, are required by the defense production act, which provides for higher OPS ceilings to reflect seasonally adjusted parity prices on live hogs to producers.

The biggest advance, eight cents, will be on pork loins, the source of chops and loin roasts, and on spareribs. Hams, bellies, Boston butts, and neckbones will be boosted three cents, and shoulders will be raised one cent.

Parts on which ceilings were not raised include the parts of the carcass usually used in making sausage, Donough said.

The world tobacco harvest for the 12 months ending June 1952 is estimated at seven thousand four hundred and twenty million pounds, 14 per cent above the previous year's total.
