OFL State Leader Lists Union Plans For Coming Year

J. D. MacDonald, president of the Oregon Federation of Labor, was the principal speaker here Friday at a meeting held at the Medford Labor temple. MacDonald spoke before members of various local unions and the Central Labor council.

MacDonald outlined decisions of the state convention held recently in Portland, on organization, legislation and other subjects. He stated that women's auxiliaries to local unions are being formed throughout the state. The women are taking an active part in union affairs, and through this activity are becoming more informed politically, he added.

MacDonald urged union members to become better acquainted with their communities and to become more active in community affairs. He pointed out that, in order to participate fully in such activities, all persons must also be acquainted with the persons who represent them in city, county and state government.

MacDonald outlined the state federation's program on legislation for the coming year. It includes more registration places; "less than a bottle" liquor legislation; opposed to closure of stations and curtailment of service by railroads; an increase in unemployment benefits; higher salaries for teachers; an increase of social security benefits and endorsement for construction of Pelton, Hells Canyon and Big Bend dams.

Lane Commended By Local Chamber

Don Lane was commended by the Jackson County Chamber of Commerce this week for his services as secretary and manager of the organization since August 1, 1947. Lane has resigned the position effective Sept. 1, 1952 to accept a similar job with the East Side Commercial club in Portland.

The commendation, passed in resolution form, points to Lane's assistance in connection with a wide program of committee work, on improved highways, additional irrigation projects, wider utilization of lumber products, and development of broader attractions to the tourist trade.

It also points out that Lane has been active in a wide variety of civic and fraternal affairs and has assumed a large responsibility for such projects as promotion of the Annual Shrine Pearl Bowl football game and the Medford Plan.

The chamber expresses its "sincere appreciation" for the job Lane has done here and wishes him success in his new position.

Shakespearean Art Display at Festival

Ashland — An exhibit of Shakespearean paintings on tile has been loaned for the annual Shakespearean festival, now underway here, and is exciting much interest—it was announced today.

The paintings, scenes of Elizabethan England, have been loaned by Virginia Blair of Blair studios in Carmel and Monterey, Calif., and the artist herself, a nationally known personality, is spending the week-end in Ashland to see the festival plays. She is accompanied by her husband, Hugh Hannon.

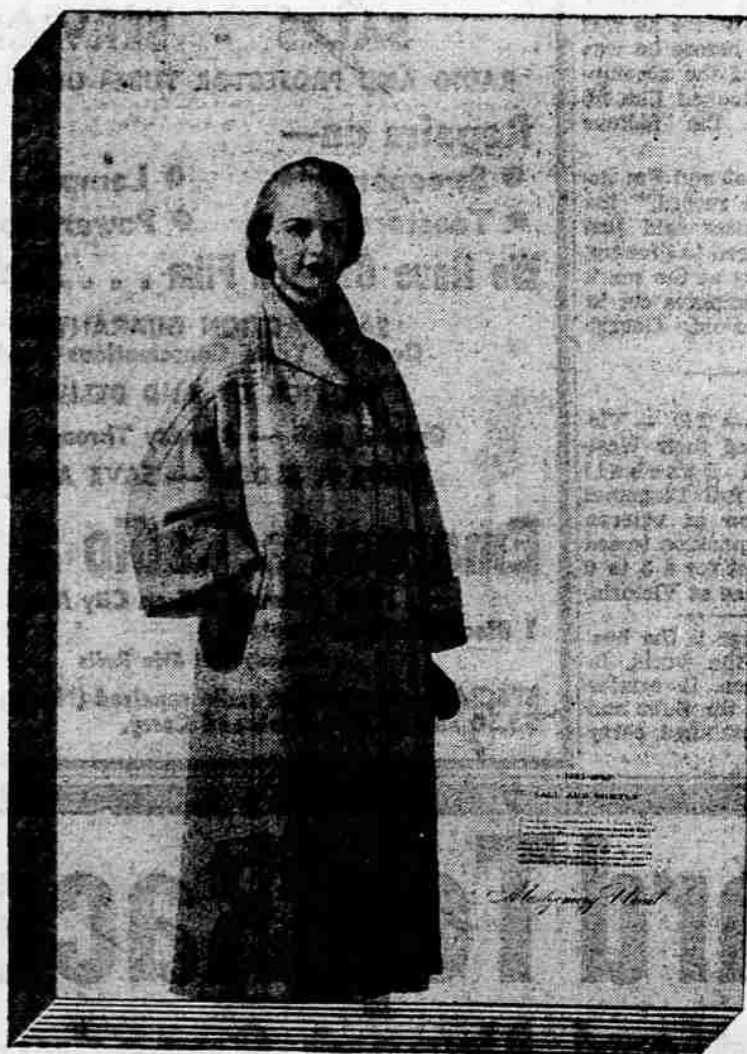

The paintings, said by festival officials to be a most valuable addition to this year's season, are being shown in connection with the Tudor fair and will remain for the entire month.

Mrs. Hannon is interested in the theater as well as art and is a founder of the Wharf theater in Monterey.
