Covered Bridges Rapidly Leaving American Scene

Philippi, W. Va. — (U.P.) — The covered bridge is fast vanishing from the American scene and along with it pleasant memories of the horse and buggy days and some bits of history.

One of the most beautiful and best preserved bridges today is the two-lane span crossing the Tygart's River at Philippi. The residents of the town and Barbour county are determined that this historic old bridge shall not be allowed to rot away as others have done, or be removed for modern structures.

This well-preserved link to the past stands near the ground where the first land battle of the Civil War was fought and it brings memories of the tramp, tramp, tramp of marching feet that echoed through the cool green hills of the Tygart's River Valley.

The bridge first came into being in 1852 and it has seen a great deal of history in the making. Slave Freed Nearby

It was near this bridge that the first slave was freed from prison after the Emancipation Proclamation of Abraham Lincoln. Near here, too, in the early 1900's Mother's Day had its origin.

However, the old patriarch never looked better than it does today, for the people of Tygart's Valley are dressing the bridge up, getting ready to celebrate its 100th birthday.

The full 100-year history of the span will be depicted in pageantry and exhibits.

The span was built of yellow poplar, cut on the scene, and stone masonry was used to secure the foundations. The bridge has proven its great strength over the 100 years.

It is now the longest two-lane active covered bridge in the country and is expected to stand for another 100 years at least. In 1934 it was strengthened to permit the heavy modern day automobile traffic volume. It forms part of the connecting link between Philippi and the junction of U. S. Routes 119 and 250 north of the town.

Only towering trailer trucks are prohibited from using the bridge because of its limited 11-foot, 10-inch clearance.

It was not long after the bridge was completed that it heard the rumble of cannon and reverberated to the marching feet of the armies of both the North and South in the battle for the preservation of the Union.

Military Objective
Actually the first land battle, although it had far-reaching effects, was pretty much of a farce. It was signalled, not by a general or military man, but by a frightened woman.

Col. George A. Porterfield of the Confederate troops arrived in Philippi late in May, 1861. He was to gather a band of loyal confederates and proceed north to capture the railroad between there and Wheeling.

Gen. George B. McClellan heard about the plan and sent his Ohio and Western Virginia forces south to hold the railroad.

McClellan decided to attack Philippi and cut off Porterfield's escape route from the town. Part of McClellan's troops were to proceed south, skirting the town, and capture the Philippi covered bridge, over which the Rebel forces would cross to retreat southward.

Premature Shot
Meanwhile the other Northern troops were to entrench on the hills overlooking the town from the north, ready to launch the attack on June 3.

As McClellan's troops passed a farm house that night an old woman was awakened and ran out of her house firing a pistol at the "Yankees."

A pistol shot was to be the signal of attack, and since it was premature, the escape route over the bridge remained open, allowing the Confederate troops to get out of the trap. Only three injuries were reported.

Along Bay of Fundy shores in Canada's Maritime Provinces occur some of the greatest tides on earth. Sometimes there is a difference of more than 40 feet between high and low tide at Windsor, Nova Scotia, as the waters rush in from Minas basin.

New Steel Process Cuts Production Time

New York — (U.P.) — A process through which a tough steel is made to flow like toothpaste from a tube is cutting production hours into minutes at an aircraft propeller manufacturing firm.

Steelways, magazine of the American Iron and Steel Institute, says that the Curtis-Wright Corp., co-operating steel companies and the Air Force combined efforts to work out a method for faster propeller production.

Extrusion, the production method by which hot steel is made to "flow" through a shaped die, long has been in use to make simple forms with uniform thickness from soft metal. Steelways says to make so complicated a shape as a propeller blade from a nickel-chrome-molybdenum steel, one of industry's hardest alloys, is something else again.

Initially, a 400-pound block of steel is electrically heated in salt solution, then put into a die and smashed at with a battering ram called a mandrel exerting tremendous pressure to form the propeller shank.

The second step requires use of a tapered mandrel to taper the shank. Then the steel is reheated, a longer mandrel is used to batter it, and the steel flows out through the die to form flat, hollow blades. The final step is simply a matter of flattening and twisting the blades.

When cigarettes are "lit up," they have no sense of reason and most forest fires are caused by smokers.

YOU BET YOUR LIFE—

Every time you cross a street against a red light—every time you dash out from behind parked cars in mid-block, every time you walk to the right, with your back to traffic, instead of to the left on a rural highway—you bet your life!

In 1930, 9,400 pedestrians bet—and lost. Another 299,000 gambled against traffic odds and came away injured. One out of every three traffic deaths were pedestrians, most of them struck down at or between intersections or on the open roads during dark hours.

We are still a nation of jay-walkers whose mental attitude apes the speeding driver, getting there fastest by the shortest route and leaving personal safety at the curb.

When you are walking remember, the red light means you, too. Cross at intersections on the green or amber light meant for you, but watch out for reckless drivers, too. On highways walk facing oncoming cars. At night wear or carry something white, use a flashlight. Let drivers know you are there.

Don't jay-walk into eternity.
